Another Girl
Alcohol, Work, Love
Marriage Is Education
Chicago's Air Week

—By Arthur Brisbane—

THE DUCHESS OF YORK has a second baby girl, no son. Between that baby, with its little head shaking, eyes that cannot yet see, trying to get used to new surroundings, and the British throne, there are only three lives.

A violent storm raged around Glamis castle as the little girl came into the world. There may be worse storms raging around that and other castles, when she goes out. No one knows in what direction civilization is headed.

The British, doubtless also the mother, father and royal grandparents, wished for a boy.

It is not a sound wish, for since Henry the Eighth the only two British royalties that really amounted to much, in themselves, were women.

Elizabeth established power in government, and Victoria established good morals in government and selected advisers that made her empire respected.

There comes a dreadful surprise, after all our efforts to be good, helped by the Anti-Saloon League, Y. M. C. A. and so many other "virtue" organizations.

Dr. Eugene Lyamen Fisk, specialist in health, and vice-president of the Life Extension Institute, sails for Europe leaving this message: "Man has three outlets for his energies, alcoholic intoxication, love and work."

And, says Dr. Fisk, "it is not a bad idea to mix the three about evenly."

To be too good, according to this observer, puts too much of a strain on man's nature. He quotes a philosopher who says that a wave of barbarism sweeping over civilization every five hundred years is a good thing, as it wipes out "complexes."

This will shock those who with strength of will have practiced vegetarianism, teetotalism, asceticism and other inhibitions.

Miss Fanny Hurst, brilliant young creature, who once announced that she did not live with her husband all the time and took breakfast with him only occasionally, now discovers that marriages "are not made in heaven."

Marriage, says she, is a business arrangement and should be considered as such. However, genius is rarely if ever sound on the marriage question, and this young lady is a genius.

Marriage is not in the least a matter of business, it is a matter of education.

Women are gradually making men what nature did not make them, monogamist, loyal, dependable. It is with hard, patient work for the women, and a severe training for the men, but eventually the thing will be done, although it may take 1,000,000 years.

Yesterday, several air derbies were flying from East, South and West to the greatest of all air meetings that begins in Chicago today.

Two thousand air planes will meet at the edge of Lake Michigan. Pilots will include men from all over the world, and from almost every city in the United States. Many women are included among fliers that will take part in the various contests.

To know what flying has accomplished, and what the human race is doing in the air, go to Chicago before the end of the coming week. The earlier the better.

Gandhi, it is said, consents to call off his "disobedience campaign" if Britain will give "dominion status" to India, putting that 300,000,000 beehive on a plane with Canada, Australia and South Africa. The interests Britain, tired of added expense and diminished revenues.

It interests us also. The farmer in the middle of this continent is almost as much interested in what happens to China and India as the Chinese and Hindus themselves.

If China were eating instead of fighting and starving, if the Hindus were at peace and buying, our farmers would not be afflicted with "too much wheat, and low prices."

Queen Helen of Rumania, apparently possessing common sense, decides not to remarry King Carol, who left her and their son to go rambling with another woman.

She will enter a convent. He will marry somebody else, perhaps the woman with whom he rambled.

That is the difference between man and woman. The queen might have amused herself here, where we are very hungry for royalty. She chooses a convent.

Mr. Gerard, former ambassador to Germany, adds five to his list of men that rule the United States, increasing the 59 to 64. He adds S. Z. Mitchell, president Electric Bond &

Shelton, Wash., Aug. 23 (AP)—The turmoil created by a wounded 45-foot whale paralyzed shipping here yesterday.

The whale was discovered in a log pond which it had reached through miles of inland waters. Jimmy Freeman, log rolling expert, donned his calked shoes and climbed aboard. He drove a harpoon into the giant mammal and tied it to a log raft. The whale then was shot 10 times with a rifle.

It struggled back to the bay dragging the raft with it. Boatmen gave it wide berth as it threshed about the harbor. It was later recaptured.

FOSS ATTACKS COOLIDGE ON CONVENTIONS

He Defends Primary Law and Says Tariff Is to Blame for Unemployment

Firing the first gun of his campaign for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator as a bone dry, former Gov. Eugene N. Foss today selected as his target former President Coolidge's advocacy of a return to the old convention system of nominating candidates.

One of the galaxy of headline speakers at the big Democratic outing in Ferncroft Inn, Foss declared he was amazed with Coolidge's advocacy of the repeal of the direct primary.

"I have not the slightest hesitancy in taking issue with Mr. Coolidge, for reasons I have set forth time and again," the "Old Boy" stated.

INSIST ON PRIMARY

"The wording of the letter I sent to our chairman of the Democratic State committee on the day prior to the Democratic conference at Worcester on July 26 is in absolute harmony with my advocacy of this constructive legislation—the direct primary—contained in my first inaugural address as governor of this Commonwealth in 1911, wherein I pointed out the solution of the seemingly vexatious problems in reference to the direct primary, as indicated by Mr. Coolidge's articles.

"I said in my inaugural address in 1911 that the use of money in our elections has become a great evil, for it amounts

HARBOR AND AIR TRAFFIC TIED UP BY GALE

Many Boats Torn From Their Moorings; Boston Missionaries Are in Peril at Sea

A raging northeast gale, driving before it the highest tide in years, ravaged the New England coast today, causing thousands of dollars damage.

Trees were uprooted, sea and air traffic paralyzed, pleasure craft torn from moorings and hurled ashore, and mountainous combers thundered up the beaches, flooding streets and cellars.

Off the coast a crippled freighter carrying two Boston missionaries with their eight months old baby, floundered in tow of two Coast Guard cutters trying to make this port.

3 FISHERMEN MISSING

Three Portland fishermen, at sea in a 33-foot motorboat, were 24 hours overdue, with the sea rising and wind increasing, and Coast Guardsmen had started a search for them.

They are Antonio Raduano, skipper; Antonio Jimi, and a man known only as "Jerry."

The missionaries on the crippled American Export line freighter Express are Mr. and Mrs. Alford Carlton and their daughter Muriel, who were booked in Boston by the American Board of Foreign Missions for the Near East.

The Express sailed from New York a week ago yesterday, and when due east of Newfoundland slipped her turbine and was completely disabled.

Her radio calls drew the coast guard cutters Mendota and Champlain to her assistance, and after some difficulty lines were placed aboard and they started towing her to Boston.

BUCKING HEAVY SEAS

This morning she was reported more than 1000 miles from Boston with cutters making less than five knots bucking heavy seas.

The weather bureau ordered storm warnings changed to northwest from Sandy Hook to Nantucket, and northeast warnings were ordered north of Nantucket to Eastport, Me.

The new disturbance was reported 120 miles south of Rhode Island, moving north-northeastward with increasing intensity.

ton Airport, no ceiling being reported along the coast, and harbor shipping was at almost a complete standstill.

Along shore surf was spouting far above the usual high water marks, clawing at he foundations of cottages, gouging out roads, and bursting in showers of spray over breakwaters.

Commander Robert Luce of the U. S. Coast and Geodetic Survey reported that last night's tide reached 12.55 feet, the highest since 1926, and today's storm is expected to create a new record.

Coast Guardsmen and volunteers were busy salvaging craft which were ripped from their moorings and in some cases tossed on shore to be pounded to pieces.

YACHTS TORN AWAY

In Pleasure bay off South Boston Yacht Club, wind and tide took heavy toll, and three Coast Guard boats were dispatched to round up drifting craft.

The $150,000 steam yacht May flower, with steam up and the crew aboard, dragged her anchors and tore off a piece of rail when she swung into a schooner yacht moored nearby. The hook was pulled up and the Mayflower sought safer moorings in the upper harbor.

Off Savin Hill Yacht club a number of boats were dragging and a coast guard crew went to their rescue.

The heaviest sea in years were breaking on Wollaston Beach, shooting over the five-foot breakwater and flooding the boulevard.

The first boat to go ashore was the 40-foot cabin cruiser of Edward C. Harris, signal man at the Harvard games in the Stadium, and a candidate for the Democratic nomination for the Senate.

His boat, the Vedenette, piled up on the beach, and was followed by the 50-foot cabin cruiser of William H. Newell of 35 Royal st., Wollaston, which went ashore near the Squantum Yacht club.

OTHER CRAFT PILE UP

Newell, who has just recovered from illness, put out in dory but lost one of his oars, and was in some danger when a man ran into the surf, retrieved the oar and threw it out to him.

A $35,000 motor launch and a $15,000 sail boat were among the other craft that piled up on the beach, and crews from both yacht clubs were busy trying to save them.

At Winthrop, 15 streets running out of Shore drive, between Ocean Spray and the Beach, were inundated by the surf, which thundered over the rail on the drive and burst in the road.

The streets carried from eight inches to a foot of water, the worst affected being Sturgis, Moore and Cutler aves., where cellars were flooded.

WINTHROP BOATS LOST

Sand, stones and debris were piled up on Shore drive, interfering with automobile traffic and driving pedestrians from the road.

Charles Eskridge, proprietor of a boat livery, lost 12 small boats, nine of which were recovered.

At Beaumont and Revere surf was sweeping over roads and flooding cellars, while small boats were going ashore as their anchors failed to hold.

The Arbella, replica of the famous Pilgrim ship, tied up in Charles river basin, was dragged some distance, but her moorings held. She was tied to a barge, and also has anchored down.

Along the South Shore the storm struck with vicious intensity, slashing the Plaza and bunting on houses and stores in Hull, and forcing a postponement of the Gala Day exercises scheduled for this afternoon.

HEAVY GROUND SWELL

A 40-foot sailboat owned by Jeremiah Donovan of Coleman & Donovan was drifting ashore at Green Hill and coast guards put out to its rescue. It was believed there was no one aboard.

Coast guardsmen at Cohasset, Scituate and Duxbury declared the gale had reached 45-miles an hour, and that a dangerous surf with a groundswell was beating along the entire south shore.

At Nantasket the groundswell was running three miles out, with only a mile and a half visibility along shore.e

SWEDEN HAILS ANDREE AS AIR HERO

Battleship Will Be Sent to Get His Body, and a State Funeral Is Planned

Stockholm, Aug. 23 (INS)—Bridging a gap of 33 years, Sweden prepared today to pay posthumous honors to three of its most gallant adventurers, Dr. Salomon August Andree and two companions, lost in 1897 in an attempt to float across the North Pole in a free balloon.

News that the bodies of the three ill-starred explorers had been found in the remains of their camp on Fritdjof Nansen land (formerly Fran: JoJseph land) by an expedition under the leadership of Dr. S. Horn caused intense excitement throughout his native land.

Thirty-three years ago Dr. Andree was the butt of cruel ridicule by many persons who saw nothing but foolhardiness in his pioneering attempt. Today, he was accorded the accolade of a hero.

Newspapers throughout the country paid tribute to the explorer as a man whose courage and idealism paved the way for later successful aerial conquests of the pole, such as those of rear-Admiral Richard E. Byrd and Captain Raold Amundsen.

STATE FUNERAL PLANNED

The greatest honor in Sweden's power is expected to be paid by the dispatch of a Swedish battleship to Tromsoe, Norway, to take the bodies from Dr. Horn's vessel, the Fratvaag, upon its arrivel at that port on Sept. 10. The warship will carry the bodies in State to Stockholm, where a State funeral is to be held.

One page in the diary of Andree, today gave the first meagre clue to the dramatic story of adventure and failure which started when his ill-starred free balloon took off from Dene's island, Spitsbergen, in July, 1897.

This page, the last one in the diary, was the only one examined by Dr. S. Horn, Norwegian explorer.

500 MILES FROM POLE

Among the entries was the position 83 degrees north, 15 degrees east, many miles northwest from the point where the remains of the encampment were found on White Island. Scientists and explorers here who eagerly examined the meagre reports received from Dr. Horn said this position indicated Dr. Andree's balloon was less than 500 miles from the pole when disaster overtook it.

The position given is in the Arctic ice-pack, north and slightly east of Franz Josef Land. From this position the camp is approximately 720 miles due east of Spitzbergen, indicating the explorers had attempted to fight their way back, by foot and sledge, after their balloon was forced down. Battling the rigors of Arctic weather, they aparently had covered several hundred miles before their provisions gave out or some other disaster caused them to give up the trek and settle down in the camp where they were found.

The domestic help problem is solved by living in kitchenette apartment and the best are advertised daily in the For Rent columns.

ican serves the air audience of New England.

The history of the growth of station WLEX the "Voice of the Minuteman" at Lexington, is interesting. Developing from a hobby of its original and present owner Carl S. Wheeler it has grown from five watt stage to its present rating of a regional station operating on 500 watts.

OPERATED LOCALLY

Two years ago WLEX was operating as a local station with permission to use 250 watts in the daytime hours and 100 watts in the evening. WBET was bought by the Lexington interests changing its call letters to WLEX and simultaneously the call letters of the original Lexington air station were changed to WLEY.

Today these two stations operate as two distinct and separate broadcasting units under the same ownership and management. The major station WLEX has won a fond spot in listiners interest throughout New England.

STORM ITSELF SAVES 40 MEN BLOWN TO SEA

Gale Hurls Small Boats on Breakwater After Ship Is Pounded to Bits

Lewes, Del., Aug. 23 (AP)—Blown to sea on the wings of a 50-mile gale in one of the worst storms Delaware bay has seen in years, 40 men of the crew of the Consolidated fishing motor ship Emily A. Foote stepped ashore here today to tell a thrilling tale.

Their 100-foot craft pounded to pieces beneath their feet and they were blown to sea in two small boats. Exhausted, they found safety today only when their lifeboats crushed against the stone wall of the outer breakwater.

Helping each other up the slippery sea-washed walls, the band walked three miles across the top of the wall to the harbor refuge light, where they remained until daybreak.

The ship was returning to Lewes, its home port, from a fishing expedition up the Delaware bay and met the gale shortly before 10 p. m. Its loss is estimated at $100,000.

Capt. John M. George of Palmer, Va., realizing it was impossible to make shore in the face of the storm and heavy seas, ordered the anchor thrown over when they neared the breakwater. Tossing about on the waves, its anchor dragging as if helpless to outride the fury of the sea, the craft cast adrift toward the out breakwater. Hardly had the order to man the two lifeboats been given when the vessel lost section after section of its deck, and finally was pounded to pieces by the waves.

Somewhere in the background stands some individual not named, perhaps the richest among corporation lawyers, who has more influence than the 64 put together, because he tells them what to think and what they can do.

Just why Mr. Gerard dragged in two distinguished union labor men is not understood. They know, if Mr. Gerard doesn't, that union labor has no influence in government. The motto of politicians is: "Union labor talks between elections and votes mechanically with its party on election day."

You will notice that in his list of 64, that "govern the United States," Mr. Gerard still includes no president, vice-president, senator, governor, not one person elected by the people. They must be bad choosers.

If the people get as somebody said "the kind of government they deserve," it must be that New York does not deserve much.

The other day it was shown that "racketeers" in the sale of milk levy on the consumers a tribute of more than $1,000,000 a week.

Now the state attorney reveals a "flour racket," organized to blackmail bakers and put up the price of flour. It collects only $1,050,000 a year, and is just a baby racket, at present, but will probably do better later.

Court Holds Three in Sacco Disturbance

Pleading not guilty to charges of making public addresses on Boston Common without permits, three men, one the chairman of the committee which planned last night's Sacco-Vanzetti demonstration were arraigned before Judge John Duff in municipal court today.

Requests for continuance to August 28 were granted and they were released in $50 each.

The defendants were Nathan Kay, 26, of Winthrop st., Roxbury, chairman; Israel Prager, 31, of Quint ave., Allston, and Fred S. Biedenhatt, 51, of New York.

The latter is general secretary of the Shoe and Leather Industrial Union.

The meeting proved a disappointment to a crowd of curious that had gathered in the expectation that a free-for-all would ensue between police and followers of the International Labor Defense, the organization that staged the meeting.

SPEAKER EMBARRASSED

Prager opened the festivities and more to his own surprise than to others he was allowed to continue by Capt. Richard Fitzgerald, in charge of the police detail of 100. The latter ruled that one speaker did not constitute a meeting and therefore did not violate the park rules.

Expecting that he was to be stopped at the start, Praeger found himself unprepared, but managed to struggle through 28 minutes of a disconnected attack on a variety of subjects, including the so-called Sacco-Vanzetti Memorial committee, a rival organization.

Toward the end, his eyes wandered through the crowd and his speech suddenly stopped in favor of the introduction of Kay, who is a district organizer.

At this point Capt. Fitzgerald ruled that the violation was made and quietly ordered two patrolmen to make the arrest.

PRAEGER JOINS MARCH

Biedenhatt was introduced to fill the gap when Praeger failed to locate Harry Canter, Communist candidate for governor, who recently completed a year's sentence at Deer Island for slandering ex-Gov. Fuller. Biedenhatt's arrest followed.

When Praeger objected he was swung into the march to the Lexington st. station and the "meeting" dissolved itself.

A score of public officials from ex-Governor Fuller down to the arresting officers in the Sacco-Vanzetti case, were verbally slayed last night at Old South Meeting House at the Communist meeting staged in opposition to that on the Common.

The historic church was crowded to its 1000 person capacity but order prevailed throughout. Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of New York furnished most of the fireworks as he delivered a tirade against "the anarchists of the Sacco-Vanzetti tragedy."

Judge Webster Thayer, who presided at the trial, was described as "a Gilbertian Lord High Executioner who had consigned himself to immortal infamy," by Rabbi Wise.

"Using the term anarchist in its meanest sense, the anarchists of the Sacco-Vanzetti tragedy were not those humble and high-minded advocates, Sacco and Vanzetti, but the judges, the jury and this commission," he said.

"Without awaiting the decision of the people, they in substance took the law into their own hands."

"MA" TO BARE INSIDE STORY OF AIMEE'S "KIDNAPING" AFTER DEATH

"STATEMENT FROM GRAVE" PREPARED

Mrs. Kennedy's Memoirs, Now Sealed in Vault, Put "Two and Two" Together

Los Angeles, Aug. 23—A "statement from the grave," which will reveal, among other things, the inside story of the "kidnaping" of Aimee Semple McPherson, has been prepared by Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, the evangelist's mother, and is now in a sealed vault in a Northern city.

Mrs. Kennedy late yesterday revealed that some time ago she prepared the statement, which, she declares, is to be r de known only in the event of her death.

The statement, she said, tells "everything" about her work with Mrs. McPherson, the history of disagreements, and what she thinks about the famous "kidnaping" case.

HAS HER OPINIONS

"The truth about that," she said, will be revealed only at the judgment. I don't know and never knew here Aimee was from the time she left me to go to the beach that day in 1926 until she reappeared in Arizona.

"But I have a brain, and I can put two and two together. I can't help but think that my daughter was under the influence of the same two women who are dominating her now."

Mrs. Kennedy declared that this secret statement contains "things that never have been told before," and that it was for this reason that she wanted it kept hidden until her death.

Mrs. McPherson and her mother were both reported in slight relapses last night, as interest in the latest mother-daughter dispute centered about Mrs. McPherson's legs and Mrs. Kennedy's nose.

At her beach cottage, the evangelist was denied all visitors yesterday and was said to be suffering from the excitement of the previous day, when she had received numerous callers, including the official delegation from Angelus Temple.

MRS. KENNEDY WORSE

At Brentwood Sanitarium, Mrs. Kennedy was obviously worse, suffering from keenly the after-effects of a new operation to correct the danger of her nose setting crookedly. She alleges her evangelist daughter broke the recently remodeled nasal organ in a violent fight.

Physicians attending both women issued positive edicts that their patients must see no one.

But in the meantime, a new element entered the story when it was reported that Mrs. McPherson, about the time she sought the aid of facial surgeons, had also desired to have excess fat removed from her legs.

It was said that the operation had been refused, and that instead she had gone on an 18-day orange juice diet in order to reduce, combining this with Swedish massage.

During the early days of her illness, her associates said that "sister has eaten no solid food for two weeks; she has been kept alive on liquids." It was also stated that she had lost 20 pounds during her illness.

Mrs. Kennedy's nose was treated and rebandaged to make sure that it would heal straight.

"It was going all crooked," she said. "So they fixed it—and it hurt terribly—and put on a new strip of adhesive tape that pulls my nose back where it belongs."

What Row? Ask Wives of Cambridge Battlers

Blow by blow descriptions of the Russell-McMenimen mill, direct from the homeside, revealed "sumpin" today.

It's all been kept a secret from their wives? ? ?

The ballyhooless fiasco of Thursday, staged in the Cambridge mayor's office assumed a new aspect today as the feud went on again, off again, on again.

Chronologically it's like this:

"McMenimen is the way to blame—he swore."—Mayor Russell.

"Russell was to blame—he slandered."—McMenimen.

"The two made up and shook hands."—Friends.

"They didn't make up and shake hands."—More friends.

"Mayor Russell was out of the house and in bed at the same time."—Mrs. Russell.

"McMenimen 'said he was out'" —A man's voice.

Round 2—with the interviewers leading—toward the wives.

"The mayor is in bed and can't be disturbed."—This from Mrs. Russell at the Essex summer home.

"But we want to straighten out this tangle on the fight," she was asked.

"I don't know anything about it."

"But he told you about it, didn't he?"

"No, he told me nothing about anything." (click)

A ring at Councilor Timothy F. Murphy's house brought Mrs. Murphy to the phone. Murphy was generally credited as the bearer of the olive branch that brought the two contestants together yesterday afternoon.

"Mr. Murphy is out and I don't know what time to expect him." (Married men please copy).

"I don't know anything about any row."

"But your husband told you, didn't he?"

"I don't think he knows anything about it because he hasn't told me anything about it. I hope you'll excuse me."

And that checked the Murphy family.

The McMenimen home was undisturbed by either door bell or phone bell.

Telephone operators reported the receiver unhung — which ended that.

Moral: Get into politics. You don't have to tell friend wife anything.

200 PLANES ON HAND AS AIR RACES START

Big Heliocopter Has Close Call When Propellers Are Smashed; N. E. Fliers There

By a Staff Correspondent

Chicago, Aug. 23—With more than 200 planes in attendance and 100 more expected, the National Air Races started at Curtiss-Reynolds airport today.

Craft are of all types and varieties, from one-place pursuit and specially designed speed ships to multi-motor transport planes, helicopters and lighter-than-air ships.

A successful helicopter demonstration was given in which the plane made a perfect landing following a vertical descent to the ground. A large four-bladed horizontal propeller that gave the impression of a windmill made this possible.

CRASHES PROPELLERS

A regulation type propeller gave the ship forward speed. Taxying up to the line the two props became entangled whena wire support broke and dropped a blade of the larger one into the rapidly moving smaller one. The big blade was chewed in two and the small one was badly bent.

Lowell R. Bayles was one of the early New England arrivals, flying on from Springfield in the low-wing Gee Bee with which he recently flew second in the All-American air derby.

He made the trip from Springfield in six hours, 27 minutes, stopping at Syracuse and Cleveland.

Two New England pilots who arrived earlier in the week. They are William H. Winespaw, who flew on from Rockland, Me., in a Travel Air, and Capt. Harry R. Genereux, who brought the state of Connecticut's Vought Corsair to the scene.

Bleachers have been erected all the field with a seating capacity of 65,000 and advance ticket sales have amounted to nearly $150,000. Cash prizes totalling $100,000 have been offered. Numerous other expenses are expected to result in a net deficit of $600,000.

AIRPORT FAR AWAY

The races will last ten days, through Sept. 1. There will be 56 competitive events in addition to five transcontinental derbies of various classes.

A Boston Airport attendant is doubly impressed by the perplexity of that field to the city after a visit to Curtiss-Reynolds Airport. The scene of the air races is 45 minutes' running time from the center of Chicago by train and bus or trolley and bus.

Lieut. James Doolittle, noted army pilot, flew non-stop from Washington to Chicago to attend the dinner of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce Association with a letter of best wishes from President Hoover.

Lieut.-Commander Richard E. Byrd was the guest speaker last evening. He prophesied that air travel would be the cheapest mode of transportation within a few years.

UNHURT IN FALL UNDER TRAIN

Seven-year-old Johnny Foti of Howard st., Roxbury, today owes his life to his presence of mind when a train passed over him at Columbia station of the rapid transit.

Johnny was on his way home from a swim with his brother, Paul, six, and Johnny Simpson, "the kid next door," when the trio decided on a short cut over the tracks.

The others got across but Johnny tripped as a train bore down the stretch between Columbia and Savin Hill stations.

Lying prone between the inbound and outbound tracks, the boy was within inches of death as screeching brakes brought the train to a stop.

The crew set him on his feet and he recovered readily from his fall and fright. A trip to the hospital was required to treat scalp wounds and abrasions of the right elbow but Johnny and all concerned were glad it wasn't worse.

Veterans and Young Folks Provide Many Thrills and Spills at Cohasset

IT WAS A MIGHTY FINE little horse show and what it lacked in numbers it more than made up for in quality, both in the ring and on the grandstand. We heard that Bobby Jones, the greatest golfer in the world, was there and that certainly was an honor for the Cohasset Horse Show. The east wind seemed to pep everybody up, even the horses, and there were thrills and spills enough to keep everyone alert and interested.

AND HOW THE YOUNGSTERS can wear their riding togs! They swaggered around the paddocks like professional jockeys, keen about their mounts and very much enjoying their day, for which they had been schooling and training all summer. All the veterans were there, the Bancrofts, and Tolmans, the Danforths and Davidsons—sounds like names out of Dickens, I think—and many visitors from the North Shore and elsewhere.

MISS NANCY WHITMAN was in the grandstand with Patricia Bird, daughter of Mr. Reginald Bird of Framingham, whose guest she is over the weekend. Miss Adelaide Blake was smart in green sport dress and beret sauntering about with her guest, Miss Anita Foulihoux, of Short Hills, N. J., also in green sports costume, and her cousin, Mlle. Marchand, from Paris, France. Miss Blak. made her bow this spring at the Dedham Polo and Country Club. Mrs. F. P. Dibble of Newburyport had a large box party in which were Miss Anne Green of Middleton, very chic in yellow and brown ensemble, and Miss Priscilla Donnell of Danvers in green tussah sport suit.

A FLOCK OF GAY RAILBIRDS were Sue Cocker, Sally Adams, Frances Hovey and Connie Matteso of Cohasset, all in various types of sports-wear and having just the best time jollying the cameras and anyone else who came under the path of their mischievous eyes. Mr. Hugh Bancroft and his gracious wife kept a kindly eye on everything and seemed to thoroughly enjoy the good time that was had by all. The show is continuing through today.

New Skull Caps Defy Rule at Deauville Casino

By BARON GEORGE WRANGEL
Universal Service Special Cable

Deauville, Aug. 23—The new mode for feminine skull caps has successfully defied the Casino rule which strictly bars hatted women from the rooms after 9 o'clock.

The new headgear for formal night wear was launched by a blonde beauty who appeared in a skull cap of pale blue shirred and gathered velvet, matching her gown.

Quite the choicest woman around the Casino's rooms these nights is Madame Harmann Neumann, young wife of the Viennese banker. With her snow-white hair tinted a sapphire blue, she wore a white dress with a sapphire-blue cloak and a large chinchilla collar. Her jewelry was a wonderful sapphire and diamond necklace and bracelets.

LADY CUNARD ATTENDS

Mortimer Schiff, the American banker, entertained a large party for dinner. Among the guests was the American-born Lady Cunard. She wore white crepe georgette, tight at the hips, with a fullness from the knees to the ankle in the back only.

Other guests included Lady Carnavon, formerly Catherine Wendell, of New York, who wore a printed chiffon of white leaves on a grey background, low cut in the back with invisible shoulder supports, giving the effect of no bodice support.

Lady Louise Mountbatten, who always travels with 20 trunks and three maids, wore a pale pink gown with a short frill starting 10 inches below the waist, giving the effect of a short tunic, while another flounce, 10 inches longer, reached the floor. Mrs. Thomas Buchanan Gilford, of New York and Philadelphia, was tall and fair in a plain green lace, a Callot Soeurs model skirt stiffened with horsehair giving a crinoline effect. Over this she wore a green velvet cloak lavishly trimmed with red fox fur.

WEARS CABLE OF SILK

Madame Martinez De Hoz, whose husband is the owner of the famous Estancia Chapadmalal in the Argentine and the well-known stallion, Craganour, which was the disqualified Derby winner in 1913, is always the most striking of the younger set. She wore a white crepe georgette dress with a skirt of entirely hand-knotted silk fringe. Instead of her famous diamond and pearl necklace she wore a large cable of heavy silk falling half way down the bodice.

Madame Paul Dubonnet was in white, embroidered with small white beads, and covered by a long red velvet coat. Lady Scarsdale, whose husband is heir to the Curzon marquisate, looked quiet and demure, her wonderful white skin set off by pale blue chiffon with a pale blue velvet cloak and a three strand pearl necklace.

HOOVER TAKES UP WATERWAYS

Washington, Aug. 23 (US)—President Hoover is at his mountain camp today working out plans for speeding up the Mississippi flood control project as a means of relieving unemployment in the southern drouth states.

It is planned to make $35,000,000, which was to have been expended after next Jan. 1, immediately available for this work.

The President also is discussing the whole subject of inland waterway development with Secretary of War Hurley, Maj. Gen. Lytle Brown, Chief of Army Engineers; Robert E. McConnell, New York engineer and old friend of the President, and Col. Hanford MacNider, newly appointed minister to Canada, who will have charge of negotiations in connection with the proposed St. Lawrence waterway.

The domestic help problem is solved by taking a kitchenette apartment and the best are advertised daily in the For Rent columns.

Tercentenary Pilgrimages

No. 65—DWIGHT TAVERN, WARREN

A typical inland town tavern is represented in this remaining landmark of the town of Warren. Situated on a through route to the west, it sets cornerwise upon East Main st.

The age of the building is unknown, but it has been traced as far as the year 1718. A large square edifice with roomy interior, it was ideally placed on the old high road between Boston and Philadelphia during the days of the Revolution.

BUILDING UNCHANGED

It had been a tavern of long standing at that period. Old coins have been found in the cellar with dates of 1721 upon them. The building has been unchanged, in outward appearance at least, since the time when Gen. Washington stopped overnight on his march from Bunker Hill to New York.

Sydney Dwight was the original builder and landlord, and it is his name which the landmark takes. The first Dwight in this region was among the first settlers. The name Simeon Dwight is recorded as town clerk in 1775.

The tavern was the scene of many gay parties attended by distinguished guests, among them governors and their wives. The interior still retains marks of ancient vintage, such as the original hinges on the door. The wainscoating, too, is very old, evidently put in when the house was built. It is scarred and dented from the logs thrown into the woodbox which stood in the corner of the tap room.

STAIRWAY ENCLOSED

The stairway is enclosed as in some early buildings. The ceilings are heavily beamed, the rooms unusually capacious. In the rear of dwelling wide cracks in the heavy planking used to let in daylight, and fine drifts of snow in the winter. These have been filled for warmer habitation.

Automobiles whizz by in great numbers daily along this old stage highway, now adapted for modern use. It is the main artery to western points from Boston, U. S. highway, 20.

The End.

New Bedford Clubwomen Elect New President

By NANCY BREWSTER

The New Bedford Woman's Club, one of the most active in the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's Clubs, will this season be directed by a new president, Mrs. C. E. P. Thompson of 65 Center st., Fairhaven. She succeeds Miss Maude Sumner.

Approximately 500 women are members of this club, the membership limit having been set at 600. They meet the second and fourth Fridays of the month at 8 and 3 p. m. alternately, the clubhouse.

They pursue such activities as Americanization, art, conservation, community service, drama, education, legislation, literature, mother-craft, music, publicity, public health, American home, co-operation with war veterans and junior membership. They also contribute to the Near-East Relief Fund, work with the Girl Scouts, sponsor scholarship funds, aid disabled soldiers, participate in hospital work and assist the Red Cross.

In directing the activities of this powerful group, Mrs. Thompson will not only follow similar philanthropic and civic works, but enlarge upon those in which the clubwomen are already engaged.

Fourteen New Club Leaders to Learn Federation Policy

Fourteen new club presidents will be taught the federation policy by Mrs. Bert S. Currier, seventh district director of the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's Clubs, in accordance with the custom. Otley, Arlington Heights Study Club; Mrs. Collins Graham, Belmont Woman's Club; Mrs. Arthur S. Pike, Chelsea Woman's Club; Mrs. Lewis E. Leary, Woman's Club of the East Boston high school center; Mrs. Everett H. Rice, the Friday Club of Everett; Mrs. Albert T. Sprague, Revere Woman's Club; Mrs. A. G. Good Housekeeping Seeks 12 Greatest U. S. Women

New York, Aug. 23—WHO ARE THE TWELVE GREATEST WOMEN IN AMERICA?

Good Housekeeping magazine is asking the question, and will pay $5000 in prizes for the best answers.

The process of selection will occupy four months, following which the magazine will commission a distinguished artist to paint the portrait of each of the twelve selected, thus founding the "Gallery of Great American Women."

The judges who will make the final selections after nominating ballots have been received for four months are: Otto H. Kahn, Dr. Henry Van Dyke, Newton D. Baker, Booth Tarkington and Bruce Barton. No woman is included on the board, says the magazine, because "any woman qualified to serve might herself be qualified for selection."

Every individual will be eligible to cast one nominating ballot. In addition, the magazine will offer 177 cash prizes to writers of the best 250-word letters accompanying the nomination ballots. The first prize of $500 will be followed by others ranging downward to 100 prizes of $10 each.

Although it puts no rigid definition on the term "Great," the magazine makes these suggestions:

"We think it would not be disputed that a great woman must have served her own community or the country at large in some distinctive way, professionally or artistically, as a social worker, an educator, a philanthropist, an artist, a leader in economic or sociological movements that have made and are making life the splendid thing that it can be."

Daily Antique No. 178

The Boston Museum of Fine Arts is proud of its collection of old Windsor chairs. Here is one of them made in 1750. Note the turned arm that extends around the chair. The seat is shaped and the rake of the legs and tilt of back make the chair a most comfortable one. Earliest American examples of the Windsor chair came from Philadelphia. Of course the peasants near Windsor, England, were the originators of the chair.

Boston Evening American is publishing daily photographs of interesting antiques. Owners of antiques of Colonial or early American origin or of historic association are invited to forward photographs and records for publication. If a photograph is not available, the American will send a cameraman to photograph the antique, providing the owner lives in Greater Boston. Address the Antique Editor, Boston Evening American, 3 Winthrop sq., Boston, Mass.

U. S. 'TALKIES' TAKE EUROPE BY STORM

By GEORGE W. HINMAN, JR.
Universal Service Correspondent

Paris, Aug. 23—American methods of sound picture making today have definitely established themselves in this capital of production for the international markets of Europe and elsewhere.

The prevailing view is that it will be only a question of time before all the big American producers will be operating their own studios here for the making of non-English versions of sound films.

Starting from scratch, one American subsidiary here has produced in less than a year nearly 100 features and 50 "shorts" for the international market. Every important non-English tongue is included in the list of productions in ten languages.

The studio payroll totals roughly $30,000 weekly for a personnel of about 250. The capital investment involved is about $2,000,000 and overhead costs are considerable.

The inability of French film producers to recognize the inevitability of the "talkie" and France's slowness in getting started gave the Americans their lead. It was only a year ago that Robert T. Kane came to France from Hollywood and began to work.

Kane's first move was to purchase the old Gaumont production lot at Joinville, near Paris.

Production began before the French film men realized what had happened. "The Letter," by W. Somerset Maugham was produced in French, Spanish, Italian, Swedish, Bohemian and other Central and Eastern European tongues, and covered the international field.

With the realization that the talkie was genuinely revolutionary, French film producers now are working tooth and nail to regain lost ground. They have government support and every resource of publicity.

American methods inevitably dominate the situation.

Broker Is Held on Larceny Charge

Charged with larceny in connection with a stock deal, John H. Gordon, a State st. broker, waived examination in municipal court yesterday and was held in $4000 for the September term of Suffolk Superior Court.

Gordon, who lives on Washington st., Brookline, is alleged to have misrepresented the value of stock sold to Charles Cellinota of North st., North End, for $4200.

The accused was arrested in Providence Saturday, where a similar charge is pending against him.

A Wollaston man who claimed to have invested $1500 in stock of the Monroe Stores, Inc., of Quincy, lodged a complaint yesterday with the attorney general. The complainant charged that George E. Monroe, president of the corporation, refused to honor certain stock which he held. It is alleged the stock was purchased from a broker, who is said to have received it as a bonus from Monroe.

Other complaints relative to the methods employed by salesmen who sold Monroe stock are being investigated by the attorney general's office and the securities division of the Public Utilities Department.

A fraud order was issued against Monroe Stores, Inc., by the Public Utilities Department, last May, banning further sale of stock in this state. The ban followed failure of officials of the company to file required information with the securities division.

Munroe Stores, Inc., was exploited by George B. Monroe who started a chain of 12 department stores and planned more. It was incorporated in Massachusetts in 1926 with a total capital of $500,000 which was increased in July, 1929, to $1,000,000.

According to the report of Boston Better Business Bureau, 1000 shares of the common stock were issued as a bonus to the organizers and the remaining 99,000 were issued in exchange for 432 shares of the corporation original Class B stock, for which it was stated $10,800 had been paid.

The public offering of this stock was made in 1928 by W. A. Nash & Co. of Boston.

to a substantial denial of the privilege of a man of moderate means to aspire to many public offices in the state or nation, or else it overwhelmingly tempts him to make his secret peace with those private interests which will finance his campaign if he will serve them in office."

CONDEMNS CAUCUS

He charged that in the past it was no small part of the private lobby to go about the State before the caucuses making private agreements to supply candidates with campaign funds if they would promise to be friendly to the lobby interests.

"To correct that evil it was necessary to prohibit those methods of campaigning, which cost so much money, and were not in themselves necessary for the proper enlightenment of the voters.

"In my first inaugural message as Governor, under the heading, 'Popular Government,' I said the first step is to abolish the boss and political machinery which intervenes between the people and their government."

All candidates for public office without exception, the speaker continued, must be chosen by the people through the direct primary. He stressed that only by this means can they be held accountable to the people.

PEOPLE SOLE MASTERS

"No public servant must have any other master but the people," he challenged. "The direct primary selects your own public servants without reference to any machine or faction and makes them accountable only to yourselves. This procedure establishes popular government. I believe that this is as sound today as when I made the utterance."

Digressing to other acts of his administration, Foss pointed with considerable pride to his appointments to the bench. Appointments, he said, made in accordance with the American principle of qualification for office without regard to color, creed or race.

He laid the principal fault of the present unemployment situation to "unscientific juggling of the tariff question."

He declared it is "an economic truism that if some solution of the tariff question isn't found whereby broader markets can be developed for surplus production, this country is faced each five months of the year with enforced idleness."

HEARST TOURNEY HEADS GOLF WEEK

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN SPORTS

FOR SPORTS—CALL LIBERTY 4000 SATURDAY, AUGUST 23, 1930 FOR SPORTS—CALL LIBERTY 4000

MR. BOSTON
—by— JACK CONWAY

Mr. Boston has positive proof that the football season is just around the corner.

Bill Grimes had hid himself in a private office to arrange the starting times for the youngsters in the Hearst Junior Golf Championships at Wollaston when three husky individuals paraded into the Sporting Department and asked to see Bill.

"You birds are too old to compete in the junior golf championship," chirped Freddy Lane as he took a quick peek at the visitors.

"We're not golfers," asserted one member of the group.

This caused Freddy to stop reading copy long enough to give the visitors a thorough inspection. He finally broke out in laughter.

"Hello, Eddie Casey," declared Freddy. "We have had so many kids coming in here for this golf tournament that I forgot there was such a thing as a football player or a football coach."

George Grimm busted into the group and mitted Casey. George then introduced the gang to Casey, Jack McAuliffe, former University coach, and Arthur Sampson of Columbia, assistant to Lou Little. Casey, of course, is still at Harvard with Arnold Horween.

"Where's Grimes?" demanded Casey.

"In a huddle with a flock of golf entries," replied Grimm.

"Let's bust in on him," insisted McAuliffe. "We want to get his opinion on some of the new football rules."

A few minutes later the gang went into a huddle with Grimes and such a little thing as over 400 golf entries was forgotten.

Casey Looks for Great Football Season

"I look for a great football season," said the easy going Mister Casey who was one of the greatest halfbacks to ever represent Harvard. "We have a lot of good material over at Cambridge, while the other colleges have plenty of first class men.

"The day has passed when the big colleges have a monopoly on the gridiron game. Now all of the small colleges are also turning out big time teams. Most of those people who attend the games understand the rules which gives them greater enjoyment out of the various pastimes."

Open Style of Play Has Aided Football

"I believe that the forward pass and open style of play have done more for football than anything else," asserted Mr. Boston. "A team can't afford to be slow in getting at any time.

"The days when the team that had the most bulk and the best line plungers always won have passed. Light teams, well schooled in the open game, now run riot.

"The spectators enjoy the open game. They get a tremendous thrill when a player intercepts a pass or his end gets in the line and runs the length of the field for a touchdown. The same condition also holds true when somebody tosses a forward pass which results in a long gain.

Larger Stadiums Are Needed for Game

"Larger stadiums are needed to accommodate the crowds which desire to attend the big games. The graduating classes in the different colleges are increasing in size each year. Naturally the graduates are anxious to attend the games with members of their families. A man with five or six healthy boys, all interested in football, cannot get to first base when mid-season rolls around.

"I believe the general public should also receive a little consideration when it comes to receiving tickets for the major football games."

FLEET FIELD IN N.A.A.U. SPRINTS

By DAVIS J. WALSH

Pittsburgh, Aug. 23—The Hot-Foot boys, George Saimpson, Eddie Tolan, Claude Bracey, Cy Leland, et al, kin of St. Vitus and despair of the watch, will go for another constitutional over the cinders this afternoon at the Pitt Stadium and, in a series of skirmishes, will attempt to abate and discontinue all outstanding records at 100 and 220 yards.

These boys, it seems, were given the hot-foot, i. e., a lighted match inserted between the sole and the upper shoe, early in life and since then they haven't been on the ground long enough to go back home for the Christmas holidays.

With Wykoff who is not here, and Percy Williams, the Canadian, they are the greatest sprinters in the world and so this afternoon they plan to make the National senior track and field games their tinder and kindling and the record books a funeral pyre. The smoke of which will be seen around the world. Hec Dyer, the Stanford man, and Jack Elder, who once beat Williams, also are down on the books as entries in the championship century and furlong.

A new A. A. U. record in the hundred would seem to be almost ordained. At least three men in the race, Simpson, Bracey and Tolan, have beaten the games record of 9¾ and, since the track is faster than a dance floor and the weather promised a breathless quiet, not even Tolan's listed world record of 9.5-10 was deemed to be immune.

Simpson did 9.5-5 once or twice and Wykoff touched the same mark on at least one other occasion but neither effort received official tolerance. Simpson's bid being refused because he used starting blocks and Wykoff's probably for no good reason at all.

Same Field to Run in Furlong

Practically the same field will come back in the 220, but there isn't a chance of a record there, unless the precedure in the junior championship of yesterday is altered. This called for the race to be held around a turn in order that the spectators might see the entire event. All four of them did. Anyhow, neither this race nor the quarter-mile, the 220-yard low hurdles and quarter-mile hurdles, conducted under the same conditions, embraced record possibilities.

In fact, one had to look mostly to the 120-yard hurdles and shotput for probabilities in this respect, although it is conceded that Tom Warne, who was no worse than an even chance at the pole vault figures and that somebody may best the games mark in the high jump.

Ed Hamm, the 25-foot-11-inch broad jumper from down Georgia way, also has a chance any time he starts, but it is feared that Edward may not find the pits and runways to his fancy. The games record holder, Sturdy, will be Warne's only contention in the vault but Tommy has only to clear 12 feet 10 inches to beat the record and I suspect, the man who holds it.

The high hurdle field will muster Steve Anderson, the champion; Lee Bandy, Illinois; Jimmy Rockhower, Ohio State, and Johnny Morrell, Southwestern State teachers, among others that it could not be capable of anything, except an undue familiarity with Thomson's world record of 14.2-5 seconds, did 14 7-10 for a junior record yesterday and may be chasing Anderson and his 14 3-5 record when the winner parts the embroidery at the finish.

Coast Men Are After Shot Mark

The chance of a record in the shot put, with the coast men, Herman Brix and Harlow Rothert, both of whom have been crowding 50 ft. The chance in the high jump lies in the fact that at least four men have it in them to get over Leroy Brown's A. A. U. mark of 6 ft. 5⅝ in. Walter Marty did 6 ft. 6¼ in. yesterday for a new junior record. Henry LaSalette, Henry Coggeshall and Jim Stewart, the Canadian jumpers, and George Spitz and Anton Burg all have potentialities of the same kind.

The two-mile steeplechase time is hardly safe, either, considering the fact that Harry Carter, San Francisco, was under 10 minutes in execution in winning the junior title yesterday.

The order of the finish in many of the events will determine the make-up of the Americans who will go to Stockholm with the United Kingdom teams in an international meet at Chicago next week. Titleholders will defend in 10 of the 18 events this afternoon.

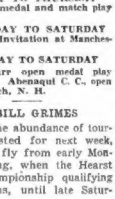
By BILL GRIMES

Due to the abundance of tournaments listed for next week, divots will fly from early Monday morning, when the Hearst junior championship qualifying round opens, until late Saturday.

Outstanding among the tournaments scheduled for the coming week is the second William Randolph Hearst junior championship of New England. The second Hearst event has set a record for attendance, such as never will be paralleled in the annals of junior golf in this section. Although, it must be admitted that a goodly portion of the field are far from proficient at the game, there are a few neighborhood 100 real golfers in the total entry for the second Hearst junior championship is 455.



Bill Grimes

Harold McGrail, caddie champion of Massachusetts, and Raymond Perry, the Wanamoisett boy who won the caddie championship of Rhode Island recently, are both playing in the Hearst. Among the other well known youngsters are Bill Donnelly, former junior champion; Leon Emerson, Johnny Sheehan, Gerard Gately, Phil Fahey, ex-caddie titleholder; Herman Goldberger, Bobby Hunter, Bobby Hopkins, Art Cody, Johnny Quinn, Marty O'Toole and scores of others. John D. Brown, from the Portland Country Club, who was the runner-up to Roland McKenzie in the Maine open amateur championship at Grand Spring, will also be a contestant.

Hearst Golfers Must Report on Time

The Boston Evening American today publishes the list of entries and the starting times for the second William Randolph Hearst junior golf tournament, which starts on Monday at the Wollaston Golf Club in Montclair.

It is essential that every boy entered in the tournament take heed of the starting time assigned to him and to be on hand, ready to play, at least 15 minutes before that time.

Because of the tremendous entry list these times must be adhered to at the exact minute and by the exact threesome selected to move off the first tee at that time. Any boy not on hand will be disqualified and no excuses will be accepted.

The rules of the U. S. G. A., which every young man who plays golf is well acquainted with, must be lived up to in the minutest detail. Every stroke must be played.

Wollaston is easily accessible from all parts of the city. There are buses that run from the Ashmont station of the Dorchester-Cambridge subway right by the scene of battle.

Trains from the South Station stop at Montclair, a half-minute's walk from the clubhouse. And a Quincy Car from the Fields Corner station of the Dorchester-Cambridge line also take one to within a short walking distance of Wollaston.

Remember your starting time, be on hand at that time, and remember to live up to the rules.

N. E. P. G. O. Tournament Monday at Hartford

The New England Professional Golfers' Organization start their championship on Monday at Hartford. This title will be decided over the 72-hole route, with a battle expected between Dave Hackney, Vesper; Jack Curley, Stoney Brae and Charlie MacAndrews, Bonnet Shores, R. I.

The annual Woodland medal and match play tournament will start on Tuesday with an 18 hole qualifying round, and the field will qualify in five divisions for match play which will begin on Wednesday.

Chick Meehan Has Big Job Moulding N. Y. U. Eleven

MANY GAPS HAVE TO BE FILLED

New York—When the New York University football candidates arrive at the Farmingdale (L. I.) training camp on Tuesday, Sept. 2, Chick Meehan will endeavor to develop capable substitutes to fill the holes left by the seven lettermen last June.

The task of molding a machine at N. Y. U. for the first game at Ohio field on Saturday, Sept. 27, with Hobart College, will be a difficult one.

The Violet football coach will have no outstanding stars like Capt. Leonard Grant, Beryl Follet, Dave Myers and "Jinx" O'Herin of the 1929 varsity eleven. The returning lettermen and the reserves of a year ago are all of about the same calibre. Indications are now that the reenforcements for this year's outfit will be found in the men who made up last season's freshman football team as well as from the older utility men remaining from the 1929 varsity group.

Dave Myers a Valuable Man

Of Dave Myers' value to the N. Y. U. team there can be no question. Myers was one of the greatest athletes ever to represent the Violet in athletic competition. Coach Meehan used Myers at guard post for two seasons and last fall, because of injuries to other players, converted him into a back. It was Myers' consistent line-bucking and plunging that kept N. Y. U. on the victory side in the contests last season.

O'Herin, veteran Violet field general, was severely handicapped by injuries during his football career at the university. The several injuries which O'Herin sustained on and off the gridiron earned him the nickname of "Jinx." O'Herin called the signals for the Violet for two seasons.

The others lost to the Violet grid mentor are H. Dudley Hormal, diminutive Violet back; W. Fred Brown, end; Leo V. Collins, reserve center, and Gerard Lanzetta, guard.

For this year's backfield, Coach Meehan has Albert Gaudet, Sanford Roland, Ed Bells, Sol Beres, Vincent Clavarelli, Victor Connor, Herman LaMark, Sherman Marsh, Paul McNamara and Maurice Rogers remaining from last season's varsity outfit.

Several good backs will be available from Archie Roberts' fresh outfit of last season. Of the backs of the caliber of talent which they displayed on the yearling eleven last fall and in the workouts with the varsity candidates last spring, the following appear likely to receive serious consideration for varsity berths: Jee LaMark, younger brother of Herman LaMark of the Violet varsity, a candidate for the quarterback post left vacant by the graduation of Jinx O'Herin; Jim Tanguay, triple threat high school star from Syracuse; Jack MacDonald, former Dedham high school three-sport luminary; Bill McNamara, Arlington high school star; Bob McNamara, flashy ball carrier and punter from Wellesley, Mass., and J. McClenahan of Stuyvesant high school of New York city.

Many Veteran Linemen

The veterans back on the line include Capt. Jerry Nemecek, Charles Marshall, Wilmot Dunn, Charles Jones and John McCarthy, ends; Ernest Concannon, Meyer Firestone, Richard Murphy and Hugh Greenblatt, tackles; Meyer Beckman, George Chalmers and Ross Grant, guards and Harry Schneider and Murray Arenstein, centers.

Among the freshmen linesmen who attracted Coach Meehan's attention in the workouts on Ohio field in the Spring are Ernest Vavra, powerful tackle candidate; "Bugs" Hugret, stellar wing from Bristol high school; Thomas Aronowitz, New Haven high school tackle; Jack Bassmann, James Monroe high school player; Herman Sabloff, tackle from Washington high school of New Haven; Sidney Bethill of New Utrecht high school of Brooklyn and Franklin Learned, Pittsfield star tackle.

Grizzled Veterans Bow to Youth in Trap Shoot

Vandalia, O., Aug. 22 (AP)—One of the greatest upsets in the history of sport occurred here today when a 14-year-old boy from Wichita Falls, Tex., Alfred Ruffus King, Jr., won the Grand American Handicap, prime event in the world of trap-shooting.

All the excitement of a heavyweight championship fight or a world series baseball game was packed into the 25 target shoot-off for the championship between the smiling youth from Texas and three grim visaged, middle-aged men from Ohio, J. L. Scott and Dan Casey, Toledo, and Lawrence H. Crampton of Dayton.

The quartet had led the field of 966 entrants with scores of 97 out of a possible 100 targets. Young King shot from scratch, the 16-yard line, Casey from 17, Scott from 18, and Crampton from 21.

While a crowd of 8000 watched in amazement, the four began the shoot-off for the championship. Scott was the first to falter, missing his second target. Crampton failed on his sixth target, and Casey his twelfth, but the youth refused to become nervous and had a perfect run until his fourteenth which he missed.

NATIONAL FINAL IS POSTPONED

New York, Aug. 23 (AP)—The finals of the women's national tennis championships, scheduled this afternoon at Forest Hills, were postponed because of rain until tomorrow.

Rolling Gymnasium for Jimmy McLarnin

Vancouver, B. C., Aug. 23 (AP)—Jimmy McLarnin, Vancouver welterweight, who will meet Al Singer, world's lightweight champion, at the Yankee Stadium, New York, Sept. 1, said today he would condition himself for the bout in a rolling gymnasium enroute East.

When the western fighter leaves Monday night for New York he will travel in an especially equipped gymnasium car in which McLarnin will live and go through his daily training.

McLarnin and his manager "Pop" Foster, expect to reach New York Sept. 9, two days before the bout.

Nebraska Plans Playoff Series

Officials of the Nebraska State League have decided that the playoff series for the pennant, provided the Mexico Generals do not repeat and win the second half, will start Sept. 2.

The title will go to the team winning three games.

Bouts Last Night

By the Associated Press

Chicago — Cowboy Eddie Anderson, Wyoming, outpointed Danny Belmont, Chicago (10); Billy Mars, Columbus, outpointed Patsy Pollett, Canada (10).

Cleveland — Frankie Simms, Cleveland, stopped Gene Stanton, Cleveland (3).

Minneapolis—Dick Daniels, Minneapolis, outpointed Al Gob, Cleveland, Ohio, O. (10); Jimmie Goldman, St. Paul, outpointed Jack Hooper, Los Angeles (10).

Casey Eliminates on 19th Target

Crampton fell behind early in the shoot-off and Casey practically eliminated himself when he registered his second miss on the 19th target.

This left the issue up to King and Scott. They were still tied at one miss each following their 21st shoots. Then with every pull of the trigger meaning victory or defeat, it was the man who cracked and the boy carried on to new heights in the clay bird sport.

Scott missed his 22d, 23d and 24th targets, while King shattered his last four targets to finish with a score of 24 out of 25.

Second place went to Casey and Crampton dropped to third.

Mrs. George Peter of Phoenix, Ariz., turned in the high score for women shooters, breaking 93 targets from the 17-yard mark.

Baseball and Football at Night

Baltimore, Aug. 23 (AP)—A special dispatch today in the Evening Sun says the announcement that Oriole Park, home of the Baltimore International League baseball team, will be lighted for night baseball and football has been made by George Weiss, general manager of the club.

TILDEN TO PLAY ALLISON TODAY

Newport, R. I., Aug. 23—Big Bill Tilden will play Wilmer Allison in the finals of the Casino invitation tournament today. He gained the title round when his doubles partner, Frank Shields of New Rochelle, N. Y. defaulted.

Wilmer Allison of Austin, Texas, member of the Davis Cup doubles team and co-holder of the Wimbledon team championship, won the right to meet Tilden in the singles final by defeating George M. Lott, Jr., of Chicago, 2—6, 6—3, 7—5, 6—3, in the upper half semifinal.

Hunter complained of a sore arm and explained that he withdrew from the semifinal round to escape exertions that might be harmful to their chances in next week's national doubles play at Brookline, Mass., as well as their team play in the current tourney.

A few minutes after James Stewart Cushman, chairman of the Newport Casino tennis committee, informed the gallery of Hunter's default, the New Rochelle publisher appeared at the center court to play mixed doubles with Mrs. C. Oliver O'Connell of Newport against Miss Irene Peacock, Newport, and H. L. Johnson, Boston. Mrs. O'Connell and Hunter were victorious in straight sets, 6—4, 6—2.

The keenest of the semifinals was the doubles match put on by Wilmer Allison, Austin, Texas, and Harrison Coggeshall of Des Moines to become finalists by defeating Berkeley Bell of Austin, Tex., and Gregory Mangin of Newark, N. J., the third seeded combination, 6—4, 6—4, 6—3.

They will play Tilden and Hunter in the finals today.

Fuller-Callahan Fight on Monday

Sammy Fuller and Andy Callahan are ready for their lightweight fight on Monday night at Mark Stadium, Tiverton, R. I., at which the N. E. crown will be at stake.

Fuller will step into the ring a favorite because of former showings in Riverton and which he knocked out Chick Suggs, Johnny Harko, Tony Thomas and Augie Ratner.

Callahan, the Lawrence boy, has lost but one fight in his professional career. He licked Sammy Fuller of the North End a few months ago in Mechanics Building.

Matchmaker Price will make an effort to sign the winner with Al Singer.

OVER THE PLATE

By JOE CASHMAN

What worth master-minding?

The New York Giants, admittedly one of the strongest all-around baseball aggregations ever assembled, floundered around the bottom of the first division while John McGraw, recognized for the past quarter of a century as the greatest of all diamond strategists, tried to think them to the top.

A fortnight ago, the Little Napoleon decided that his charges didn't have a chance of overtaking the Cubs and Dodgers this season, and turned over the job of running the club to Dave Bancroft, while he scurried around New York attending to some business or other.

Banny, never considered in his boss's class as a pilot and a failure as leader of the Braves for quite a few years, took the boys out into enemy territory deep in third place and today has them in second only three games behind the Cubs and very much in the race for the flag.

If this were the first time that an understudy had taken over the Giants and bor better than the master, McGraw, it might be considered an accident, but it isn't.

"Master Minding" Doesn't Always Prove Successful

Early in 1927, McGraw had a strong team which he couldn't get going. He took sick in mid-season and Rogers Hornsby was put in charge. The 'Rajah' had the team travelling on high in no time and when McGraw returned, they were very much in the running for the pennant. Yet, they finished many games behind the top.

McGraw's custom of telling his pitchers what to throw, his fielders where to play, his batters when and where to hit and his base-runners when to steal was a success for a great many years.

There can be no doubt about that, for up to 1924 he had won 10 pennants, more than any other manager in the history of the game.

He hasn't come even close since, however, with some mighty strong clubs, while other managers not nearly as smart and with weaker looking teams, have been far more successful by letting the players virtually manage themselves.

What's the answer?

Apparently brains, if worth anything in the game now, have dropped off considerably in value and McGraw's system of master-minding is of little use any longer.

Notes of the Sandlots

The Somerville Cubs, who took another plastering from the Philadelphia Colored Giants to the tune of 10 to 0, will be after some measure of solace when they face the Marksons, champions of Lynn City League, at Lincoln Park, Somerville, today.

The Cubs took two in a row on the chin from the Giants and this team isn't accustomed to taking many on the chin. The Markson Brothers are a powerful aggregation, having beaten Donie Cross of the Lynn Cornets, 6-0, but they're likely to run into an irate bunch of Cubs today.

Tomorrow, at Dover, N. H., the Cubs enter another tough game in facing the Dover Town Team. Dover and the Cubs are playing a five-game series of which two have been recorded with a victory for each combatant.

The amateur baseball championship of Boston will be settled this afternoon at the Fens stadium when the Agawams meet the Gunnets & Co. team of the Bankers' and Brokers' League in the finale.

The second half winners of the Bankers' and Brokers' League, Atlantic, will also be readying for the play-offs on Monday at Fenway Park when they journey to Shirley st., Roxbury, to meet the strong William J. Mahoney Club.

Al "Lefty" Koerber, who assured Atlantic of the championship in the State St. circuit, will be on the hill for his team. Lefty is one of the best pitchers around but will have to have all his stuff to turn back the "undertakers."

With Roslindale, Dorchester and Malden bunched up at the top of the Twilight League some thrilling battles are promised for the coming week with the league race heading into the home stretch.

The Burroughs Newsboys' Foundation baseball team takes its place with the top ranks of sandlot outfits. This team won 25 games this season and lost only seven. Tommy Kehoe, the youngest player on the team and a freshman at English high, pitched 10 victories while losing only one contest.

The South Boston Badgers want a game for tomorrow afternoon and prefer the St. Marks Juniors or the Ashmont C. C. Get in touch with A. J. Kennedy at South Boston 4354 between 6 and 10 p. m. tonight.

Open-Air Amateur Bouts at Fore River

An open-air amateur boxing show will be staged under the auspices of the Fore River Club, at Fore River Field, Quincy, on Friday evening, August 29.

Four classes will be contested including the 112, 126, 147 and 160 pounds. Entries close on August 26 with Jimmy Gardner at the Fore River Club.

Manchester Team in Legion Finals

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 23—Baltimore and Manchester, N. H. boys' baseball teams will meet here today in the Eastern division championship game of the American Legion Junior National tournament. Baltimore defeated Bridgeport, Conn., 9 to 7, in a 10-inning nightcap of a double-header, after Manchester nosed out Tampa, Fla., in the ninth inning, 6 to 5.

GIRLS IN LONG DISTANCE SWIM

Twelve women swimmers will attempt to stroke their way from Warren Bridge in Charlestown to Pemberton tomorrow. This endurance contest is being sponsored by the L St. Swimming Club of which Michael Tonley is the president.

The start will be at Warren Bridge at 10 o'clock in the morning. The contestants have been requested to be on hand at 9:30 with boat and trainer so that the gun can be fired at 10 sharp.

Eva Morrison, well-known swimmer, will be the favorite to beat the field to Pemberton or to go the furthest of any of her rivals. For if the water is rough and cold it will be a feat extraordinary for one of the weaker sex to stand the battering of the waves and the chill of the weather all the way to Pemberton.

Marie McKinley of Revere, Frances Vincent of East Boston, Frances Currier of Dorchester, Ellen Gerow of Roxwell and Marguerite Murphy of Dorchester are some of the girls who have sent in their entries to battle Eva. All are high class performers and may swim to victory. Other entries are expected before race time.

Baseball Too Peaceful

DUFFY URGES MORE FIGHT IN GAME

By JOE CASHMAN

If you managed to make a base hit with the pitcher trying to bean you and the catcher tipping your bat, you would be tripped at first, spiked at second and tossed right out of the ball park if you reached as far as third.

That's the picture Hughie Duffy, Red Sox scout, points of baseball as played in the days when he was the game's greatest hitter.

And Hugh believes that the pastime would be a lot more popular today if some of the old-time fighting spirit was displayed.

Joe Cashman

"There is too much good fellowship and hand shaking in baseball at present," declares the veteran scout. "When I was playing, a player looked upon every rival as a personal enemy and a player caught even passing the time of day with a member of an opposing club either on or off the field would never hear the end of it from his manager.

"As a result of this enmity, every contest furnished plenty of action and entertainment for the fans.

Players too Friendly, Says Hugh Duffy

"Today, most of the players are good friends. They greet each other cordially on the field and pal around together in off hours. This familiarity leads to a lot of tame, uninteresting games.

"One of the reasons John McGraw of the Giants is such a successful manager is because he makes his players hate their enemies, just as he did when he was a player.

"Other managers would do much better if they prevented their charges from becoming friendly with opponents as McGraw does.

"Eight had a lot to do, too, with the success of most great players.

"Cobb, Evers, Bush, Bresnahan, Hughie Jennings, McGraw, Mitchell, Tenney, Dineen, to mention but a few, always had a chip on their shoulder and others like Lajoie, Jimmy Collins, Hans Wagner, Connie Mack and Wilbert Robinson gained the reputation of being quiet-easy-going fellows because the opposition knew better than to antag nize them.

Lack of Fight Reason for Few Good Players

"There aren't as many outstanding players today because the players of this era don't fight like the old-timers.

"I asked a minor league umpire recently if there were any tough players in the circuit. 'There are no more tough players in any circuit,' was his reply. 'That's about the truth of the matter.'

"And, though a certain class of fans deny it, the average customer likes to see the fur fly occasionally and would turn out far more often than he does, if the rival teams showed a little more enmity towards each other.

"The crowds that pack the parks for days following the few battles between rival players or players and umpires that occur in this era, hoping to see another, prove that.

"Managers and players would be a lot more successful and the turnstiles at all the parks would click more merrily, if baseball would again adopt 'FIGHT' as it's motto."

Horton Smith's Golf Lessons

Famous Young Missouri Professional Illustrates and Describes the Mechanics and Technique of Play

NO. 15—APPROACH ADDRESS

A high-pitching approach of about 150 yards with a number six mashie. In this position, contrary to the majority of the great players, I address with the heel of my club. This suits me individually. I find it gives me a little cut with this stroke and a slight fade to the right.

One has to be playing a lot of golf to play this shot successfully. As British golf writers remark, most Americans play this shot with a slight drift to the left because they address with the club's toe. It is largely a matter of doing what one feels is natural to oneself.

In my grip I overlap more than the original Vardon grip. England's old master only half covered the left forefinger.

It is important that the hands should be well down and near the body.

NO. 16—NOTE THE SHOULDERS

Two important features are that the right hip has turned considerably in a rotary plane, but with no lateral motion whatever, and that the left shoulder has not dipped.

If you will compare the right shoulder with the tree in the background you will see that the left shoulder in the back-swing is exactly the same height as the right shoulder was at the address. I cannot emphasize the importance of this too much.

If I am asked to say what I considered the most important thing in the so-called golf swing, I would state unhesitatingly that the shoulders should rotate in the same plane.

Next in import to notice in picture No. 16 would be that my head is exactly as it was in the address and my back is still rounded, the weight being mostly on the right foot in this position.

NO. 17—AVOID RISING VIA FINISH BEND

The lesson in this picture is that my body is still bent over almost as much as it was in the address. At the impact it was bent over just as much as it was in the address. I am watching the flight of the ball from the bent position.

The commonest of faults is rising before the impact, and that can be cured permanently by this finishing bend.

Very likely, if you have been topping for a long time, you will continue to rise, but the cure is to put yourself down where you belong at the end of every shot. Each time you fail to do this you will delay the cure. You must finish as if you were rolling a ball along the ground.

Topping, slicing and toeing come chiefly from rising.

CYCLE STARS IN TITLE RACE

The 100 kilometre cycling derby, a 62 1-3-mile race with six entrants is the feature attraction. Record cycle track tonight. The race is also a championship event, the points to count toward the American motor paced title.

George Chapman rules a big favorite, riding against Frankie Keenan, Charley Jaeger, Frans Duelberg, Franco Georgetti and Al Letournier.

Nat Butler has arranged his strongest preliminary card of the year, with a special sprint match, a tandem race and shorter distance events for both amateurs and pros.

In the sprint, Cecil Walker, leader in the title series, faces Charley Ritter, former amateur champ, and Avanci Marcinetti. It is best two mile heats in three.

Al Crossley and Ralph Duffey, Leo Naggoli and Ralph Spiero and Bob Chrisdahl and Frank Bartell are the teams in the tandem race.

Football Mask Made to Protect Glasses

Philadelphia, Aug. 23 (AP)—A new type helmet, combining unique features of a protective mask for optical lenses, has been perfected for a University of Pennsylvania football player.

Lud Wray, new Red and Blue coach, had the mask designed for Frank Yablonski, one of his guards, who is near-sighted.

The helmet became a necessity when it was found that Yablonski could not play football unless he wore thick glasses.

Sports Editor of Brooklyn Eagle Dead

New York, Aug. 23 (AP)—Abe Yager, 60, sports editor of the Brooklyn Eagle and dean of baseball writers, died last night after a long illness. Yager had worked for the Eagle 45 years, starting his newspaper career as a copy boy.

Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

Bobby Jones, Here on Trip, Plays Fine Round of Golf

By BILL CONNELL

"Retire from competitive golf? I couldn't answer that because I don't know," smiled back Bobby Jones at the Cohasset Golf Club yesterday in answer to a question.

"The big thing ahead of me is, of course, the amateur in September. You know the kind of opposition that anyone must face in this tournament. Naturally, I want to win."

That Bobby the Great is fit for the title test was shown by his medal score in that round over the difficult Cohasset Golf Club layout. Jones negotiated the initial nine stages in 38, par golf and the second under par, for a splendid 71.

Jones' card:

1st Nine 4 3 5 3 4 2 5 3 5—38
2d Nine 3 4 2 3 4 2 4 5 4—71

Bobby played yesterday with Win Trowbridge and Charles E. Mason, both fine golfers. Neither of his opponents got much attention from the gallery. The crowd was present just to watch the one and only Jones and, though it applauded the good shots of the others, the throng was at Jones' heels all the time.

The gallery, by the way, numbered about 250, despite the fact that friends of Jones, who arranged the match, tried to keep the affair entirely secret.

Bill Connell

Bobby Jones nine in 33. Two under par, for a splendid 71.

Bobby Doesn't Appear "Crowd Conscious"

Bobby, though, is not a bit crowd conscious, and didn't mind the gathering. The golfers were perfectly behaved and did not give Jones or the other two players trouble. As the match progressed golf fans arrived in a steady stream and a gallery of championship match proportions was on the links at the conclusion of the match.

The match was arranged after Jones came to Boston on business. Just what the business matters were Bobby wouldn't say.

His 71 was remarkable golf, considering that Bobby never had played the course before. On the second nine, starting at the 210-yard twelfth, Jones had four birdies in a row.

"I enjoyed the round," he said just before leaving. "The course is in excellent shape. And it certainly was a great day for the game."

Then a farewell smile and Jones stepped into a waiting auto and departed.

Jones spent the most of the day at George W. Smith's home in Cohasset. A yachting trip was planned for the morning, but a heavy wind kicked up and the cruising was left out of the program.

Jones to Prepare for National Amateurs

Bobby left Boston last night and is not likely to return again this year. Business will take up some of his time, but he must start to concentrate on his golfing soon for his pursuit of the national amateur title next month.

While he did not state that he would retire after the amateur from the competitive grind of golf, Jones undoubtedly has some thoughts at the present time of quitting the tournament brand of the game.

Other great men of the athletic world have intended to get out of competitive sport after years of success, but even if Jones does decide not to play more tournament golf chances are that the lure of the links will prove too much for him for years to come.

Bob Galloway Wins Trot at Hartford

Hartford, Aug. 23—Four races at the closing day of the grand circuit program at Charter Oak attracted a fair-sized crowd of racing enthusiasts. The track was fast and conditions for the pastime perfect.

The feature event, the $14 stake trot, was won by Bob Galloway. Happy the Great made a bad break right after the word was given and was back of the red bunting at the wire. Bob won in very easy fashion from a half-dozen good trotters, with Atlantic Gale, who has been racing on small-time tracks, showing a splendid performance in gaining second honors.

Day Tide, with Harry Brusie at the helm, won the 2:22 trot, although Kingston did succeed in grabbing the third heat in a close finish. Gold Cash had a pleasant outing in the stake for three-year-old pacers, but the battle for second money between Arthur Mower and Capital Stock was indeed close, a bitter fight all the way down the long, long trail to home.

The special trot saw the winner in Peter McGowan once more. Brusie was back of a winner. This event was just a nightcap and spelled finish to a most successful form day program that pleased from the very start. Horses shipped here to Goshen, N. Y., when beginning Monday, Aug. 25, there will be five days of racing, with the rich Hamilton $70,000 for three-year-old trotters, scheduled for Wednesday, Aug. 27.

New York Moves to Amend Baumes Law

Albany, N. Y., Aug 23 (US)—Further legislation was given today to the movement to modify the law which compels judges to sentence fourth felony offenders to life imprisonment.

Senator Caleb H. Baumes, chairman of the crime commission, and Irving I. Goldsmith, chairman of the parole board, yesterday conferred at the capitol on the proposal that the two bodies meet jointly later to map a plan for action. There was practical agreement that changes in the present parole system other than the fourth offender phase should be considered.

Concerning Radio

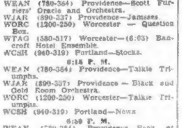
Edited by BILL WHIPPLE

There come times, and this is one of them, when we'd give a couple of dozen first-class radio tubes if we could step out of character as radio editor, and converse upon other subjects. Not that the radio theme bores us to death or that we are particularly dissatisfied with our lot—far from it. Only we get moments when we feel that we'd like to dissertate about corn, flannel trousers, feather beds and lots o. other things that hop into our mind.

Can't be done, though. You folks bought this paper to read about what is happening in the radio world—at least we hope you did—and the editor will be real mad if we don't keep faith with you. So for the present, anyway, we stick to the stern path of duty.

From the J. Walter Thompson Co., New York, a large advertising agency, comes a communication in which Phillips Lord, that young New England broadcasting genius, tells why he believes his "Sunday Night at Seth Parker's" and "Uncle Abe and David" have won such success with the radio audience.

He says: "In my estimation my writings have been well received because every program that I do not use expressions of this sort. These are burlesqued—they are what city people think country folks say."



And that's just it. It is, in our opinion, why Lord's broadcasts are meeting with such popular approval, not burlesquing the rural characters but putting them over the air as nearly true to life as possible. "Hick" characters, done by slap-stick comedians on the stage, with their exaggerated "rube" talk and absurd costumes may go over with the morons who don't know any better, but only the shrewd picturization of the country Yankee as he really is can interest intelligent people.

Much as we admire and respect the distinguished Sheldon Fairbanks Expositions Inc., which is really Sheldon himself, we've got to give him a slight verbal slap on the wrist. Here he wants some publicity in our valuable—or is it?—column, and doesn't send it along until we're all washed up and most ready to go home.

However, in view of the fact that 100 radio dealers will be guests of the General Equipment Corporation, New England distributors of the Crosley Amperad line at a dinner and dealers' meeting in the Crystal Ballroom, Hotel Kenmore, next Thursday evening, it seems to us that we ought to let the subscribers know about it.

These radio dealers are pretty good boys and we feel quite sure you readers join us in wishing them a mighty fine evening.

Now that we've gone that far in the publicity line we might just as well come right out, point blank, and speak a good word for F. A. D. Andrea, president of the Fada Company. We feel generous towards him for the reason that instead of crying about how hard times are these days, he cheerily says that business is going to be better and is so sure of it he is going to build more sets than he did during the past year.

That's the way we like to hear business men talk. Not cry about dull times but get right up on his hind legs, spit on his hands and say, "By Jimminy Christmas I'll make times good!"

Now then, three rousing cheers for F. A. D. A.

A new quartet makes its how tonight on the Fuller program over WBZA at 7:30. Reading from left to right as they perform before the mike there is Frank Parker, ex-musical comedy man and soloist on many NBC programs, Carlton Boxhill, who started as a concert singer, Stanley McClelland, baritone, and Emil Cote, the organizer, who has also been associated with musical comedy. They make their first appearance tonight singing "Thank Your Father," and a medley of popular hits. Don Voorhees conducts the orchestra.

Red Nichols, who with his "Five Pennies" was the rage of Boston when he appeared here with a show, has arranged a medley of Jerome Kern song successes, including tunes from "Showboat," "Sally," "Sweet Adeline" and other musical comedies, which will be played as a feature of the Paramount-Publix hour tonight at 10 o'clock over WNAC. This is the last Saturday night broadcast hereafter P-P will be heard from 10:15 to 11, Tuesday nights.

Unique and unusual broadcasts, talks by famous pilots of many nations, and thrilling descriptions of breath taking races are scheduled by the N. B. C. during the national air races at Cleveland for eight days, beginning today. Microphones have been placed at every point of vantage on the great Chicago airport and N. B. C. announcers will be placed to give the minute-to-minute "play" of the many events to take place during the meet. WBZA is scheduled to take the first broadcast which starts at 4:30 today.

Chinese Communists Branding Converts

Hankow, Aug. 23 (AP)—Chinese Communists were reported by refugees arriving here to be branding deep on the cheek of their converts in Hunan province the sickle emblem of communism to assure loyalty to the red flag. Several days, who escaped the clutches of Communists, themselves were branded.

The use of the red hot iron was ordered by Red leaders, the reports said, to mark permanently converts, thereby making it easy to recognize them if they deserted.

Entire armies suspected of disloyalty, were branded, the refugees said, in the area terrorized through killing, burning and looting.

Hold Ex-Official and Lawyer in Fraud Case

Hinman, former public administrator of the Borough of Richmond, were under indictment today on numerous charges of grand larceny in connection with beneficiaries of estates and presenting false claims to public officials.

The indictments followed an investigation by Dist. Atty. Fach after James A. Higgins, commissioner of accounts, found $38,000 short in his accounts.

Cathie's Interest in Her 'Boy Friend' Eclipsed by New Vision

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Catherine Paige, elder daughter in a fatherless home, secures her first position in the office of Alfred A. Farnsworth, successful engineer. In the office she meets Gordon Moore, and is instantly attracted to him, and he to her. He easily persuades her to spend the rest of the day "celebrating" her securing a position and his securing a contract for an important engineering project.

At the end of an innocent and delightful day of lunching and sight-seeing with him, Cathie finds herself deposited at her door and nonchalantly bidden goodbye.

Her pride comes to her rescue, she manages to seem as nonchalant as Moore, and only when she is safely inside the house and inside her own room does she cry over her shattered romance, and the end of her first adventure.

Wiping her tears away she comes into the kitchen to help get dinner. When Frank Prout, known to the family as her "boy friend" telephones asking to see her she says no.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER 4

FRANK PROUT sat on the Paiges' front steps, and ate freely of Gordon Moore's chocolates. After the first two or three Cathie didn't really mind. There was no reason why Frank couldn't eat Mr. Moore's chocolates . . . why the family shouldn't paw them over, reaching down to the second layer for the mints and nougats. You can't save chocolates. They're nothing to keep to remember anybody by. And besides why try to remember a man like Gordon Moore? A lot he'd care . . .

"Have another," Cathie said urgently, pushing the box toward Frank, "Dig down below, the nougats are wonderful!"

"I'd rather have a good old bag of molasses taffy," the guest said thoughtfully, but he dug down for a chewey chocolate and bit into it with critical interest.

He had turned up after all.

"Thought you might be sick or something. Never heard of you being too tired for a little fun."

So they had all sat out on the stairs together, in the warm April dusk, while Cathie told the story of the job and Gordon Moore all over again, for Frank's benefit.

Brotherly Advice

Ma had not liked it too well. Even Eddie, coming in just in time to hear the last of it, had volunteered a little brotherly advice.

"All right but don't do it again. I don't want my sister going riding with any pickup, do you get me?"

"But this was different. It was the most natural thing in the world, and he was just being kind—I'm less than nothing to him. We wouldn't even know each other if we met again!" Cathie argued brightly.

She had gotten all over her depression of an hour ago. Her cheeks were pink again, her clear blue eyes bright and shining. She laughed joyously as she coaxed and explained, and teased the family out of their first horrified surprise at their Cathie, taking chocolates, and luncheon besides, from a perfect stranger.

"Sometimes I don't know what to make of you," Ruth had said coldly, going inside to bed.

Sometimes Cathie didn't know what to make of herself. Down in the dumps one minute. Up in the skies the next. Telling Frank not to come, and being glad when he did . . .

Too Serious

"Have apother chocolate," she urged hospitably.

"No, thanks." Frank saw that the coast was clear at last. This was a break. Sometimes the family hung around all evening, and wouldn't give him a chance. He moved a little closer, and slipped an arm around Cathie's slim waist. "Listen, hon, I'm not so sure I'm going to like this office stuff for you."

Cathie felt herself stiffening. Frank's voice sounded as if . . . as if . . . well, the way a fellow's voice might sound if he were going to speak about . . . something important . . .

"Why not? Why don't you like it?"

The boy's arm tightened. His face was quite close to hers now.

"Can't you guess?"

"No . . . I went to business school, didn't I?"

"Sure. Oh, I know you have to have a job, for a while, hon——"

"For a while! Frank Prout, with me next to the oldest and——"

"I know. Gosh, it's tough on you Cath."

Silence, Cathie waited. She could feel the goose-flesh on her bare arms, and her heart beating crazily against her side. It wasn't that she really wanted him to say anything. She couldn't marry anyone for years and years, and besides she wouldn't want to marry Frank Prout anyway. Frank was all right, only he . . . oh, well . . . she didn't want to marry Frank Prout, that was all. Still, he did start to say something . . . funny that he stopped . . .

Kiss in Dark

"Well, I guess I'd better be getting along. Have to be on the job early tomorrow."

"Good night then."

Another silence broken only by the sound of a street car stopping at the corner, and me, raising the front bedroom window, inside.

"Aren't you going in? You ought to be in bed early yourself, Cath."

"I know. I'm going in a minute . . ."

He leaned over and kissed her and she put up her hands and clung to him, with a little cry, half forgetting that it was Frank who was kissing her . . . Frankie Prout, who had lived around the corner all his life . . . Frankie, who wore nineteen-dollar suits, and was good to his mother . . . It's so easy to imagine things in the dark . . . to imagine that it's somebody else . . . someone more romantic . . .

She pushed him away, and stood up. "I got to go in. Ma will be wondering—"

"All right. See you tomorrow maybe. I'll give you a ring if I don't have to work. We might go to a movie. And listen—don't you go falling for any of the guys in that office. Listen. Civil engineering ain't so much these days. I could have gone in for it myself, 'stead of pharmacy, but I knew the field was overcrowded—"

Laughs at Love

"I know it is. Now, Frank, run ALONG!"

"In a minute. One more kiss."

"No! FRANK! Ma can hear every word—"

"She can't not. Hold still. Gosh, you're a nice kid, Cath! Remember what I said about the civil engineers. Half of them starving and the other half—"

"Go HOME!"

"Now you don't let any of those fellows make love to!"

"Not a chance in the world!" she called after him, laughing.

She laughed to herself, all the while she was undressing, in the dark so as not to wake Jean. It was so funny! The thought of old Mr. Farnsworth, or ritzy Mr. Moore making love to her.

She was still smiling when she slipped into bed and laid her tired head on the pillow. But presently she found that she was crying. Not over anything in particular, of course . . . crying, that was all. And once started, it was hard to stop. She spent most of the night quietly, into the pillow.

In the morning her eyes were red, and she had to start her first day's work, decidedly not looking her best.

Not that it made much difference. It didn't take Cathie long to discover that nobody cared very much how she looked. Certainly not the strap-hangers who jostled her

Woman Jay-Walker Killed

Pigeon Killer Captured

IN THE CAPTURE of a large owl, the mystery of pigeon killings in Cambridge has been solved. The owl has been slaying pigeons for the past four months. The owl is owned by James E. Yeoman of Somerville. He was captured by Charlie Stanton, who posed with the killer. (Staff photo.)

Birth Control Is Urged by Baptist Leader

Holding birth control as society's best weapon against defectives, dependents and delinquents, the Rev Kenneth C. McArthur of Sterling, secretary of the American Eugenics Society, believes that Protestant religious forces should be exerted to encourage the practice.

At Ocean Park, Me., where he is attending the School of Methods of the New England Baptist Conference, the Rev. McArthur declared:

"It is foolish to talk about self-control among the dull, shiftless and criminally inclined groups. A simple-minded person or moronic girl does not have a baby because she wants it, but because she has no self-control. About 40 per cent of the taxes in Massachusetts are spent to support defectives, dependents and delinquents.

"Society must protect itself against these classes by segregation, sterilization, which is legal in 24 states, or birth control.

"Missionaries have larger families than ministers because it has been the policy of American foreign mission boards to subsidize the missionary when additions came to his family so that the financial strain was not felt.

"Ministers constitute fourtenths of 1 per cent of the men in America, while 11 per cent of the names appearing in 'Who's Who' are those of ministers' sons. We should encourage large families in the parsonages of the land in order to increase the available leadership in the land."

Rev. McArthur added that churches were being encouraged to make it possible for the right kind of young people to find eligible mates; that in Dr. Christian Reisner's tabernacle in New York "beau parlors" were installed, reasonable rents were supplied for struggling young couples and a roof garden made available for the rearing of healthful children, all in the interest of a higher type of family.

3 Hurt When Auto Mounts Sidewalk

James J. Magrane, 62, of 68 Magrane sq.; Daniel Knox, 63, of 62 Commercial st., and Frank Pendleton, 40, of 66 Commercial st., all of Lynn, were injured last night when an automobile, operated by Miss Frances T. Lipman, 28, of 192 South Common st., Lynn, ran up on the sidewalk on Commercial st., striking them.

The woman said she was forced to go up on the sidewalk when a driver coming in the opposite direction drove out of line.

FIRST VICTIM UNDER NEW SYSTEM

Crosses Washington St. With Traffic Light Set Against Her

The first traffic victim since the installation of the new signal lights was at City Hospital today, an unidentified woman, whom police say stepped into the street against the signal.

She was killed at Washington and Kneeland sts., last night, by an auto driven by Loretto Pagmano, 28, of 290 Copeland st., West Quincy.

According to Pagmano's story to police, he had crossed Washington st., on Kneeland, when the green light was on and the woman stepped into his path. He was held on a technical charge of manslaughter.

The woman was described as about 65, dressed in black and had gray hair. Death was reported due to a fractured skull.

Lynn Scout Saves His Chum's Life

Walter Gillis, 13, of 45 Rockaway st., Lynn, a Boy Scout, yesterday saved a playmate, Dominic Forte, 12, of 25 Rockaway ct., from bleeding to death when Dominic cut his wrist on a piece of glass. The boys were playing in High Rock park when Forte fell. Gillis made a tourniquet out of a handkerchief and a clothespin, and stopped the flow of blood until the police ambulance arrived. Both boys are members of the scout troop at St. Pius' Church.

Change Bus Line for Street Repair

Beginning today and during street construction on Washington st., Dorchester, between Codman and Fairmount, the Fairmount buses will be operated over a loop in the outbound direction only.

The route during the construction will be from Ashmont station along Talbot ave. to Codman sq., along Washington st. to Fairmount, and along the Gallivan boulevard and Dorchester ave. to the Ashmont station.

Common Programs Cause Parking Ban

With Tercentenary exercises being held almost daily at the Tribune on Boston Common, parking of automobiles on the east side of Charles st., from Beacon st. to a point 100 feet south, was banned today by Traffic Commissioner Joseph A. Conry.

The ruling was put into effect at the request of Mayor Curley, who felt that such provision would make it easier to handle the large crowds expected at the exercises.

$100 Weekly for News Tips

Do you want to get money for being alert? If so, the Boston American offers the opportunity. Every week $100 in prizes will be given for news tips telephoned in to the News-Tip Editor, at Liberty 4000.

And what is a news tip? It's the information that something of interest to Greater Bostonians has taken place or will take place. Do you know, for instance, that an interesting picture is to be obtained, that an accident has happened, that there is going to be a business merger? That's a news tip.

There will be $25 given weekly for the best, first exclusive news tip received, $15 for the next best, $10 for the next best and $2 prizes for each of the 25 next most valuable tips. Anyone who is alive and alert can win.

Bremen Presented Curley Gift

THE COMMANDER OF THE BREMEN, Capt. Leopold Ziegenbein, receives the silver trophy which Mayor Curley presented to the Bremen on the occasion of the first ship-to-shore flight of the catapult mail airplane to Boston. Baron Jobst von Studnitz, pilot of the plane, makes the presentation.

WOMAN DIES IN POLICE AUTO

Found ill in her apartment at 1328 Columbus ave., Roxbury, today, Miss Annie Keyes, 74, died in the police auto of Roxbury Crossing station en route to City Hospital.

She was discovered by Mrs. Louise Daley, a neighbor, who was awakened by groans.

Unable to get a doctor, Mr. Daley called City Hospital, and was told all ambulances were busy. Route Officer Parker H. Coleman summoned the police station auto.

Miss Keyes, an unusually heavy woman, required the efforts of Coleman and Patrolman Fordhani, Murphy, O'Connell and Quinlan to move her to the ambulance.

She had lived alone and was a sufferer from heart trouble, neighbors said.

Will Build Streets to Give Jobless Aid

In order to provide work for the city's unemployed men, Quincy will probably construct 20 new streets this fall in addition to the 1930 program it was revealed following a conference between Mayor Thomas J. McGrath and Councilor Alfred N. LaBrecque, chairman of the Finance committee. This project would give work to about 100 city laborers and would cost around $100,000.

JOYCE CALLS STATEMENT BY BATTY MISTAKE

State Federation Interested Only in Attitude of Candidates, He Says

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

The statement of William E. G. Batty, secretary of the New Bedford Textile Council and vice-president of the William M. Butler political committee implying that the Massachusetts State Federation of Labor had approved Butler and condemned his political opponent, Eben S. Draper, was today branded as "positively incorrect" by Martin T. Joyce, secretary-treasurer of the labor organization.

"Labor has not endorsed any political candidates, as it operates strictly on a non-partisan basis and is interested primarily in the the individual's past attitude on all labor legislation," Joyce declared.

COMPLAINTS FROM LABOR

The Batty statement, it was learned, created wide discussion among labor groups all over the State, numerous protests against it being received at the headquarters of the federation in the Lawyers' Building on Beacon st.

Joyce further stated that a complete and final labor legislative record of all candidates for major political office will be published early next week, in accordance with the mandate of the labor convention recently held in Boston. These records, he said, will speak for themselves.

The secretary-treasurer took the opportunity to issue a warning against any statement made by individuals "who seek by interested to have the State Federation of Labor endorse candidates by opposing others."

BATTY'S STATEMENT

The part of the Batty statement which caused the storm, read:

"I personally was greatly influenced in deciding to serve on the Butler committee by the fact that the state branch of the American Federation of Labor, after an exhaustive study of Mr. Butler's record in the Massachusetts State Legislature, reported favorably and is pledged to oppose Mr. Draper's candidacy because his record in the state legislature was unfailingly opposed to every effort that labor was ever interested in during those years.

According to an announcement from the Butler headquarters the League of Italian-American citizens of Wakefield, with a membership of 250, has voted unanimously to support the candidacy of Butler for U. S. Senator. Leonard Debarco is president of the league.

In a statement issued, Joseph E. Ely, candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor, again reiterated his charge that he was "invited to become a candidate by John F. Fitzgerald, now his principal opponent.

DRAMA THE ART BUILT ON ROCK

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

WILLIE OTHERS lift lusty lamentations, Mr. E. E. Clive, fresh from a recoiling tour of the British Isles, sends forth a resounding cheerio. The art drama is coming into better days—perhaps not the best we have known in remoter periods of memory, but still brighter and busier.

TAKING A BROAD VIEW of the question, Mr. Clive may be set down as an optimist of high order, though not given to hasty conclusions. He knows his drama from Albion's storm-tossed shores to the man-made stretches of Boston's own Back Bay. According to Mr. Clives faithful biographer, Mr. Joe Di Pesa, the compelling logic of his friend and master is that all through the ages the drama has suffered terrific setbacks. But it has survived them all and, even now, cannot and will not yield to so mechanical a thing as a talking picture. Pictures, we are told, especially those of resonant voice, may have become an annoyance to the established art of the speaking stage, but never will they subdue it. Worse things have happened to the drama and its wares are still on sale.

Nicholas Young

IN HIS OBSERVATIONS, Mr. Clive makes note of the fact that the gramophone (English trade name for talking machine) first reproduced the human voice for an incredulous public 40 years ago. In those 40 years the contraption made quite a flurry in domestic life, but the theatre kept moving forward. Mr. Clive points out that the manipulation of the gramophone with a motion picture, while interesting, instructive and undoubtedly a movement of great merit, cannot take the place of the drama which gave Aunt Emmas and Uncle Wilberts viewed contentedly from the parquet.

"There's one thing indisputable," asserts Clive; "motion pictures both silent and vocal, have filled a great need in entertainment. But no student of dramatic history will ever believe that the drama itself will be replaced by them. More powerful agents have failed in repeated attempts to destroy the theater of the spoken word.

* * *

"ONE OF THE MANY Henries on the throne of England branded actors as rogues and knaves and forbade theatrical performances. Burlesque, vaudeville—even moral reform—and a dozen other things have threatened it. Every means has failed; and every one will fail as long as there's an audience."

GIRL WINS AS OLD TIMERS LOSE OUT

Another girl has crashed filmdom's gateway to fame and fortune. Jean Harlow, 19, Chicago society girl, was selected to play the feminine lead opposite Ben Lyon and James Hall in "Hell's Angels," the aviation film which will open the Tremont on Labor Day, for its New England premiere.

More than a score of prominent movie actresses tried out for this part, which was awarded to the Chicago girl after a screen and voice test in which she displayed exceptional promise. Miss Harlow has the role in "Hell's Angels" which Greta Nissen originally portrayed in the silent version, which was re-filmed upon the advent of talking pictures into a 100 per cent sound and talking production.

Miss Harlow is a natural blonde of striking beauty. She was brought to the attention of Mr. Hughes by Ben Lyon, who urged that she be given a test for the enviable role which many experienced actresses were seeking. Both her screen and voice tests were so outstanding that she was immediately placed under contract.

DOROTHY PETERSON CHOSEN FOR FIRST NATIONAL LEAD

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor
Copyright 1930, by Universal Service, Inc.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 23—Dorothy Peterson's promised success on the screen demonstrates that the new type of star need not necessarily be a beauty. While Miss Peterson's best friends, nor even her own mother could ever accuse her of being a Helen of Troy, she is definitely set as the first lady of First National dramatics this coming season.

Louella O. Parsons

Miss Peterson has been chosen as the star of "The Lost Lady," Willa Cather's novel, first purchased for Corinne Griffith and then later handed to Billie Dove. When Miss Griffith and Miss Dove ended their contracts with First National there was much speculation as to what actress would finally play in "The Lost Lady," renamed "The Reckless Hour."

We are told that it was Miss Peterson's work in "Mother's Cry" that gave her "The Lost Lady," now planned as the first production to be made when First National reopens in November.

JOHN STONE, who has been in charge of the Fox film foreign department, has gone East to confer with Clayton Sheehan. The conference has to do with the opening of two studios in Europe. The purpose is to locate talent. What with the foreign versions making it important to feature linguists Mr. Stone will park himself in Paris and try to pick up a few good numbers for the Fox foreign versions.

THERE IS NO DOUBT in my mind that the former Cornell professor, Louis Wolheim, is more interested in directing than he is even in a good game of bridge. Louis is all warmed up to the idea of putting on a real picture for R. K. O. and the company is letting him go to it in his own way. His first is "Sheep's Clothing," a story of the sea, and we are warned in advance that "Sheep's Clothing" is only a tentative title. Mary Astor gets the lead. I saw Mary lunching at the Embassy last week in riding clothes. She looks better than I have seen her look in a year. A little added weight, while it may show on the screen, certainly doesn't interfere with her appearance off screen. She is prettier than she was before the doctors told her it was necessary to add a few pounds.

THE PRODUCERS will not take a chance these days to releasing a picture to the fastidious public before they are certain it is all right. The story of "New Moon" was never exactly what Irving Thalberg wanted so he wisely decided to make changes before it was too late. With two expensive stars such as Grace Moore and Lawrence Tibbett it would never do to give them a vehicle unworthy of their talents. The picture has been re-written with a very good part for Adolphe Menjou.

ONE OF THE BEST performances in "Holiday" was that of Monroe Owsley who created the part of "Ned" on the stage as well as on the screen. Up to the time he played opposite Ann Harding in the talkies version of this modern play young Owsley was not so well known in Hollywood. But it only takes one picture to start the ball rolling and that one picture has done its part for Mr. Owsley, who is at Columbia playing opposite Barbara Stanwyck in "Roseland." As I said before, this title will have to be changed. You can bet on the management of Roseland, the famous New York dance hall; rising up in arms unless the story is 100 per cent complimentary.

SIDNEY BLACKMER is on his way East to Lenore Ulric. Lenore has been paging her husband by wire and telephone, inviting him to hurry Eastward to play the role opposite her in "Keys to Paradise," the J. D. Williams play which stars Miss Ulric this coming season in New York. With the closing of First National studios Sidney was able to get away until the first of November so he packed up and took the first through train to Broadway.

SILENCE THE CUE FOR THE PLAYERS

"The White Hell of Pitz Palu," now on the Park screen, is a remarkable film so far as the soundless picture goes. Made in Germany, with a capable cast, it brings to Boston audiences a sterling photoplay, reminiscent of the best of the old silent drama days.

A bride and groom spend their honeymoon in a cabin on the icy slopes of Pitz Palu, a peak in the high Alps. They are interrupted by Dr. Krafft, whose own honeymoon three years before ended tragically there when his young wife was lost on the perilous north wall of the peak. They join him in his search for his wife's body. A hazardous climb, a fall, the rescue, a fight against starvation and freezing, are told so dramatically by the camera that the story holds the audience breathless.

The high moment of the film is the attempted rescue of the three by Germany's ace flier, Udet. As his plane swoops down over the precipices, nosed into unbelievably narrow caverns and circles over the trapped sufferers, the suspense is great.

Winsome

HELEN GRAY
MISS GRAY is one of the reasons why "The Second Little Show" is a hit (Wilbur).

ACTOR'S FINE AND DANDY

Joe Cook, star of the new musical "Fine and Dandy," coming to the Colonial on Labor Day, was born in Chicago, Ill., 37 years ago. His father was Spanish and his mother an Irish-American girl from Pierceton, Ind. Both parents died when Joe was six years of age, and he and a younger brother, Leo, were adopted by an Evansville, Ind. family named Cook. Joe's name before his adoption, believe it or not, was Joe Lopez. His stage start was made at the age of 15 in vaudeville. His first show was the inaugural edition of Earl Carroll's "Vanities" in 1923.

Since then he has appeared in several editions of the Carroll revue, a musical comedy called "How's The King?" and the recent musical hit, "Rain or Shine."

Joe Cook

SIMPLE SONG SIMPLY 'IT'

The second edition of "The Little Show," pleasantly remembered from last year, is now at the Wilbur, where it is staying for a third week. This edition needs no help from the original version, standing very much on its own merits. It is an unpretentious extravaganza, with a winsome choir of 14 agile ingenues and seven young men who really dance.

Al Trahan is chief comedian, it's steals the show, in his own apocality, and is ably assisted in blackouts and sketches by such competent performers as Jay Flippen, who has just been added to the cast, and who compliments Mr. Trahan's humors in his own inimitable way. Others aiding the proceedings are Ruth Tester, whose "Sing Something Simple" is quite the cutest bit of the show, Davey Jones, Gloria Grafton, Helen Gray, Ned Wever, Joey Ray, Kay Hamill, Gus Hyland, Tashamira and others.

ORPHAN RISES TO STARDOM

Dread of life in an orphan asylum started Rita La Roy on a theatrical career. This eventually led to Hollywood and a stellar role in Radio Pictures' "Midnight Mystery," now at the Keith-Albee. She was born at Kit Scotty, Alberta, Canada, near the Prince of Wales' ranch. Her mother died when she was a baby, and she lost her father when she was thirteen years old. Left alone on a ranch, neighbors planned to send her to an orphan asylum. So she ran away, dressed in boy's clothes and hitch-hiked to Spokane.

She found refuge with a woman who kept a boarding house. Her first job was as a waitress in a Bohemian cafe where all the help had to perform to entertain customers. It was there she caught the attention of a stock company director who gave her a chance on the stage in a minor part.

FEET OF CLAY, YET BRAINY

In making of "Common Clay," the Fox movietone drama now at the Modern and at the Scollay Monday, a number of prominent film people "made their debut" with the Fox organization, after establishing their reputations at other studios. Constance Bennett, who plays a leading role; Lew Ayres, in the chief masculine part; Beryl Mercer, Matty Kamp, Charles McNaughton, Purnell B. Pratt and Genevieve Blinn, as well as Director Victor Fleming and Scenarist Jules Furthman, are among those who make their initial Fox venture in this production.

Lew Hickman is another favorite. Also there are Evelyn Dubois, Betty LeNeir, Rene Fortier, with William Morris vaudeville specialties offering. Roberts Bent and Driscoll; I. J. Irving & Co., and Jack Strauss, a pocket edition of Al Jolson.

RKO vaudeville will present the Six Marcnelli Girls, an athletic novelty, and Ewing Eaton, the musical comedy favorite.

As a special feature the pictures of the Kid Chocolate-Berg fight will be displayed and the action will be described by Jack Sheehan. Other pictures include: "Bulldog Drummond," "The Woman Racket" with Tom Moore and Blanche Sweet, and comedy and news.

The Gayety opens today with a matinee as well as an evening performance. "Frivolities," with an all-star cast, is the first offering. This hodge-podge of fun, music and color will continue all next week.

The theatre has been redecorated and refurnished. Manager Max Michaels promises much that is new for the coming season, and says that Gayety patrons will see bigger, better and funnier burlesque than ever before. "Frivolities" includes George Shelton and Violet Buckley. There will be some special numbers today by Holub's "jazz hounds."

Burlesque, Films, and Vaudeville on Program

"Burlesque as it should be" is the way Charles Waldron announces his season at his Casino, opening next Saturday. Added attractions are two all-talking photoplay features and vaudeville talent, making three shows in one. The main inaugural feature will be the "High Rollers" burlesque.

LUCK OFTEN PLAYS THE UKULELE

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

THAT MAGNIFICENT PICTURE, "All Quiet on the Western Front," again is seen hereabouts. With all its glories of direction, acting, settings and action, it holds the featured spot on the screen at the Washington St. Olympia and the Uptown. This is good news; for none should miss this photodrama.

* * *

It was worth our second seeing. It's just that good. As it has already been reviewed in these columns, we could let imagination go straying—for instance, it picks upon Lew Ayres. Since the first view of "All Quiet" we have beheld this youngster elsewhere on the silver sheet; right now he is a much sought after actor in the studios. For tune certainly kissed his high brow when it found him strumming a "uke" just a year ago; he's getting a fat salary today and the choicest roles for his type. Not forgetting a constantly increasing amount of fan mail. They do say he's mighty popular with the ladies, with a chance of forging to the front soon as the champion accumulator of letters from flappers and ohers.

Lewis Ayres

FUNNY THING ABOUT this chap. He's still modest. Honest. Not a bit swanky or swelled-headed, they tell us. Quite the same fellow he was when he was doing his bit twelve months ago in a dance orchestra. He lays his pride to luck; which is probably true in part. And yet he has ability, so that Dame Fortune may not take all the credit. It is good to hear that he wears his honors lightly, and that he is able to blush boyishly when being introduced to a charming girl, or when being paid a compliment.

AYRES DOES A SUPERB job in "All Quiet" and it was not surprising that the sudden fame that came to him following the road-show screening of the war picture set him on a pedestal for the Hollywood producers to see. The Universal film was his big opportunity; he had previously done minor parts. But his handling of the Paul Baumer role proved his big "break."

* * *

FOR THE BENEFIT of fans, it may be added that Ayres was born in Minneapolis, on December 28, 1908; that he went further West at the age of ten; that he quit college after one year to be a member of a dance band. When Director Lewis Milestone picked him for Baumer, the musician was happy, of course, and he was frank enough to confess it.

SHORT RADIO WAVES USED TO KILL GERMS

By GOBIND BEHARI LAL
Universal Service Editor

New York, Aug. 23—Treatment of diseases, by killing disease germs and their poisons within the patient's body, with high heat, induced by electric waves, is a new and revolutionary possibility in medicine.

First, short length radio waves, passing through the human body, create artificial fever. Secondly, this heat or fever makes the actual death of destroys their poisons. Moreover, this same heat increases the production of antibodies that are substances nature uses to defend the body against pestilent germs.

INDUCING FEVER

The production of artificial fever by radio waves, of exceedingly short lengths, was accomplished by the General Electric research laboratories at Schenectady, N. Y. Dr. Albert R. Pass and Charles M. Spencer, who made the tests at Schenectady, affirm:

Studies of infectious diseases in laboratory animals lead us to believe that two desirable effects are obtained by raising the body temperatures

First, the increased heat within the body makes a less favorable environment for the growth of the virus. Second, the heat hastens the rate of those chemical processes, concerned with immunity against infectious germs."

SHORT WAVES USED

Increase of 25 patients' temperatures were raised from the normal to over 106 degrees, Fahrenheit. No bad effects ensued.

The radio waves found to be most effective are of 20 meters length. They oscillate between two and six hundred million times per second. The patient lies between these plates.

The electrical waves pass to and fro within his body, their frictional passage is resisted by the salty blood serum, and so heat is generated in the body.

CHOOSING THE WAVES

J. C. McClennan and A. C. Burton, University of Toronto, Canada scientists, have discovered a process for making short radio waves, of 10 to 200 meters long, by which the preparation of agar agar jelly mixed with lerio-domrecruate of silver, filled in a Geissler tube placed in the way of the radio waves, the substance changes color.

This change keeps pace with the heat and the wave length of the waves.

So, the medical users of the short radio waves might be able to adopt the waves of various type of disease.

FAMOUS RACKETEERS

True Accounts of Underworld Gentry Who Have Made Bad in the Big City

Hymie ("Kike and Tell") Giovanni

Nevertheless, Hymie Giovanni was born in Aurora, and taken at an early age to Chicago, where he lived the normal life of a growing boy—stealing coal and cursing policemen—until he was eighteen years of age.

It was then that he suddenly launched forth into the sordid world of desperate chances and illegitimate gains.

Because of his faultless manners and neat appearance, Hymie had no trouble in getting a city ordinance passed requiring that people beat their rugs twice a day. He then hurried around to the stores and bought up all the rug beaters. When law abiding people sought to purchase a rug beater the proprietor of the store would say, "See Hymie." Woe to the merchant who failed to thus direct business to the store racketeer—the merchant, if so, would get a swift kick, when, and where, he least expected it, and fuming, would see Hymie disappearing around the corner.

One thing led to another, until—

CHAPTER 28

IF KIT CAMP saw either the boy kneeling before the shrine or the scar-faced man, he gave no sign. He drew a breath of delight as they stepped into the gathering dusk of the street, took Judy's arm, began to hurry her along.

"Saved the big treat for the last, Judy, my dear. You'd never guess. Well, shall we walk a little? Going to the French town now. You must see the old houses — steinways running up outside—and signs all in French. A little corner of Paris—no, Beaudeaux; you find America all over Paris these days. It's a city by itself, this French quarter. Even the children chatter French."

She said, "Yes—well," and walked at his side, seeing the picture of the boy kneeling in the Cathedral. What [illegible] of Tris Miller. What [illegible] when he was gone?

Something Grim

About Scar-Faced Man

What sent the scar-faced man to watch him—lurking in the shadows? Something grim about the scar-faced man. Something relentless.

Tris had said he wasn't going ashore. It was pain now he had wished to be alone. Judy had known doubts who were half ashamed to admit deep religious faith. Tris probably was one of these, a wording with scant confidence in the world's consolations.

Once or twice she had thought him reckless and hard. This was when she had said something which seemed to draw the curtain over his eyes, when all that he went out of his smile and he was restless and unhappy. That was doubt, was only the surface. But why had she never [illegible] before, that beneath the Brass swagger was a [illegible] and tired and lost?

Kit gave her a [illegible] stooped over and [illegible] her ear and [illegible] when she jumped.

"Doesn't present company suit? Wandering off—where to, fair maid? Back on Mt. Royal, looking at the unsociable rivers?"

She was troubled but this was not fair to Kit who was so eager for her good time.

"Why don't the rivers mingle? You'd think they couldn't help it. They do make you think of selfish folks who won't give and take."

"If'm—married folks. Modern wives. Ones who go their own way. Call it living their own life, I hear. You know the ship's surgeon? That's his sort of wife, poor devil. She paints pictures or some silly thing and can't be bothered cruising with him. Won't even be Mrs. Ship Surgeon but makes everybody call her Miss. About the only time they get together is when they're in a row. And the law calls that marriage!" he finished hotly.

"It's your idea," Judy began with paltry calmness, "that this woman should give up her painting. Her in a ship's cabin, go trailing in the wake of her lord and master? Like—well like the rovers I suppose the Ottawa has some individuality of its own? Or would you just pick it up and lose it as the St. Lawrence—and the St. Lawrence gobbles the other and swells up with pride? That, your idea of marriage, that the wife must be just a part of her husband the pride, an important part?"

"Ah, Judy, and you so sweet. So old fashioned notions. So that pretty head! The old ideals."

"Ideals! What ideals are you talking about, Kit Camp?"

"Very ancient ones, Judy, my dear." He quoted in a triumphant way. "Wives submit yourselves unto your husbands. . . . For the husband is the head of the wife!"

"Rot!—well, they say even Satan can quote Scripture," she [illegible] angry as all the old antagonism prodding her. "But Paul wouldn't be so high and mighty if he'd had a wife. Besides he said something about husbands loving their wives, didn't he? That a man should love his wife as himself. Lot of men do that nowadays—oh, my yes!"

Some [illegible] Kit's voice was grave. It made Judy feel all at once flippant and small [illegible] before a mountain.

"Judy [illegible] more to say, walking [illegible] as [illegible] something [illegible] anger [illegible] Judy came [illegible] But Kit [illegible] herself the [illegible] He was a stupid [illegible] man with [illegible] of [illegible] to [illegible] to [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Erskine Sees Better Profits in Auto Trade

Studebaker Head Predicts Gain in Last Half of Year

By M. S. RUKEYSER

New York, Aug. 23.—Most economists feel that general trade pickup is to a large extent contingent on improvement in the basic automobile industry, the new balance wheel of commerce.

A. R. Erskine, president of the Studebaker Corporation and the Pierce-Arrow Company, told me that he thinks sales and profits for the automobile industry will be better in the second half of this year. He regards the increasing preference for low priced cars as only a temporary effect of the depression.

As for what appears to wheel industries, Mr. Erskine, whose job is lifting Pierce-Arrow out of the red in the last two years, has been a noteworthy accomplishment, said:

M. S. Rukeyser

"Free wheeling is a radical new speed. Generally, cars are being built than ever before."

He said that the decision of motorists to drive their cars much longer had resulted in a pent up demand, and that it presaged an increased business in 1931.

Mr. Erskine indicated that his company had effected very marked economies and heightened efficiency of operations in recent months.

The executive pointed out that his company had not changed hourly wage standards, and it hoped to continue them, indicating its belief that high wages are most desirable.

Asked what was needed to stimulate exports, Mr. Erskine said:

"Recovery of some prosperity in foreign countries, which are now as bad off as we are."

Mr. Erskine added that recent experience had strengthened his faith in instalment selling of automobiles.

"Dealer mortality has been greater than last year. Stocks on hand are much lower."

L. A. Miller, president of the Willys-Overland Company, said:

"I do think in periods of depression it is very natural for one to use what he has beyond the time when he would ordinarily buy new, and that results in pent up demand.

"Our company has effected great economies and increased our efficiency during recent months. When business returns to normal, the effect of these will be greatly to our advantage.

"We have made no general change in our hourly wage rates. It would prefer to see present rates maintained, and think they can be maintained.

"The selling of automobiles on the instalment plan has not been affected by the depression."

"Export sales have improved year by year and will continue to improve so long as we are able to furnish suitable automobiles at attractive prices."

In issuing a call for the annual convention of the American Bankers Association, to be held in Cleveland, September 29-October 2, John G. Lonsdale, head of the association and president of the Bank of Commerce & Trust Company, St. Louis, said:

"The banking business is fundamentally sound; the achievements of the business as a whole in the last decade have been incomparable; it has been the mainspring in a season of unparalleled prosperity, and it has held firm, sound and unmoved in the recent period of stock market deflation. Lying before it are greater opportunities for public service than have ever before been possible in banking, and it is our principal duty to develop these opportunities.

"But, notwithstanding all that, the rapidity of modern business change, the strength and daring of business enterprise, the tendency of large scale operations, both within and without banking, have brought us to the threshold of a new era in banking, wherein our daily routine is likely to be affected by new laws, new circumstances and perhaps a modified public opinion.

"This new era should be better and happier than its predecessor. My only fear is in connection with it is that we may fail to think hard enough about it, that we shall fall short in our estimate of its possibilities; that we shall not do our full part in marking out the course of business and of banking, but shall leave it to other and less experienced hands."

HIGH YIELDS OBTAINABLE IN MARKET

By FRANK H. MELOON

It is pointed out in Wall and State Sts. that yields of 7 per cent to 17 per cent are obtainable today in the stock market. The higher yields would be very alluring except for one thing. That is the fact that their continuance is very uncertain. The uncertainty does not, of course, embrace the entire list. The showing for corporations as a whole is far from bad. This is evidenced by the fact that a compilation of dividend announcements by leading companies between July 1 and Aug. 20 by The Wall Street Journal shows: Dividends unchanged, 649; dividends increased, 3; dividends decreased, 21; and dividends omitted, 20.

City of Boston has no difficulty in arranging for big loans. The bigness of a loan is, after all only as established by comparison. City Treasurer Edmund L. Dolan gives us details of the $4,000,000 City of Boston loan for which he will receive bids until noon next Tuesday. The bonds will be exempt from taxation in Massachusetts and from the federal income tax. They will pay interest at 4 per cent. It is a trafific tunnel issue. The city reserves the right to reject any or all bids, but it seems a safe bet that the issue will be well sold.

The financial writer who forecasts an all-around change in New Haven train service may have based his conclusion on the fact that the end of daylight saving schedules is not far distant. Or perhaps he may have seen the New Haven cars that have the new seat arrangement accommodating two on one side of the aisle and three on the other.

Florid municipal bond troubles present interesting aspects. The advice not to sell without scope inquiry into conditions surrounding the individual bond is certainly sound. A Tampa lawyer gives some information which we print without believing any comment is needed. He writes:

"A deliberate attempt has been made by bond houses throughout the country and by some of the distressed taxing districts to mislead the public indebtedness on the State of Florida. That cannot be done, because under the constitution of Florida no bonds can be issued or indebtedness created by the State except to repel an invasion or to suppress an insurrection. And that provision will not be changed by the people."

Waldorf plans to retire its preferred issue by the end of the year without special financial strain, State St. hears. Two important new shares are under construction in New York, another is in process at Harvard sq., Cambridge, and a fourth will be available upon the completion of the Edison Building on Tremont st. The Waldorf System earned more than 152 units

In the face of depression and notwithstanding many lower food prices, Waldorf was actually able to increase its sales volume in the first half-year by 1½ per cent. Keen merchandising and strict economy enabled it at the same time to increase net profits by over 8 per cent. In July profits increased somewhat.

* * *

New York newspapers are printing news carried in this column several weeks ago. It runs to the effect that Dr. Daniel F. Comstock, president of Comstock & Wescott, research engineers of Boston, former member of the faculty of Massachusetts Institute of Technology and principal inventor of the Technicolor process for making colored motion pictures, has announced invention of a new method of refrigeration which, in addition to performing the usual function of preserving food, is adapted to cooling of homes and small business buildings.

Middle West Utility System Output Up

Middle West Utilities System's output for the week ended Aug. 16 was 77,896,215, an increase of 3.5 per cent over the same week last year.

This figure does not include the output of properties acquired during the past year.

Kilowatt hour output of the system has increased over the preceding week and over the same week for 1929 for four consecutive weeks.

Output of Lead in Month Gains

New York, Aug. 23 (AP)—The world output of refined lead for July amounted to 153,356 short tons, compared with 150,541 in June and 167,270 in May, the American Bureau of Metal Statistics reports.

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

An increasingly optimistic tone is displayed by market letter writers. All are busily engaged in picking favorites for an expected advance. There is a marked change in tone regarding the outlook for the coming months, although a tinge of blue is to be encountered here and there. One writer says:

"We continue especially partial to the restaurant stocks and to the chain store issues. These companies should have a very profitable third quarter. We note that for the first six months the net sales of Atlas Stores were $16,194,592 as against $7,346,014 in the corresponding period of 1929. Believing that the stocks of these two groups are overdepressed, we would have no hesitation in accumulating Childs, Shattuck, Waldorf, Exchange Buffet, Best, Hahn, Woolworth, Montgomery Ward and Sears Roebuck.

Warner Bros. Viewed as Good

A powerful banker, unbiased but thoroughly familiar with the Warner situation, declared that its financial improvement can be impaired only by a sharp setback to the entire industry which, as a matter of fact, has recently emerged from a severe depression.

Wall Street had expected the receivership action, it having been given widespread publicity on Thursday when seemingly everybody in the street heard such action was planned. If the management paid fancy prices for new acquisitions, yet fro mthe stockholders' standpoint the company's real difficulties are more or less behind it, particularly as the emergency funds required are furnished by the new stockholding, underwritten by bankers, many contend.

Ryan Aircraft Is in New Control

St. Louis special says plant of Ryan Aircraft Corp., makers of Col. Lindbergh's famous "Spirit of St. Louis," which was closed Aug. 1, because of business depression, has been purchased by Phil De C. Ball, owner of the St. Louis Browns. Ball bought property from Detroit Aircraft Corp. in which he is stockholder. It includes building and machinery, but does not involve manufacturing rights for Ryan planes, which will be manufactured in Detroit. He declined to reveal purchase price.

Woolworth's Prospects Good

QUIET buying of Woolworth is reported for the account of "insiders" and is based on the expectation that August will show a heavier sales volume than July and the same month last year. Directors will meet Wednesday considering the low rate of business activity in recent weeks. There is a belief in Wall Street that this improvement continues, directors may give some consideration to an increase in the dividend before the end of the year and might follow this with another substantial distribution of a special nature early in 1931. At present the stock pays $2.40 annually and is selling on a basis to yield around 4 per cent.

Alcohol Rules Worry Holders

Tighter government restrictions imposed on manufacturers of alcohol is giving much greater concern to those who own the stocks at considerably higher prices.

Loew's to Gain by New Patent

Loew's is being looked upon favorably on the belief that it will obtain exclusive rights to a new projecting instrument owned by one of its principal subsidiaries.

Public Service Revenues Rise

DECREASE reported by Public Service Corporation of New Jersey in gross and net last half had as much to do with its recent strength as short covering operations. The size of the "bear" account in the stock has been reduced the past few days. The favorable July statement contrasted strikingly with the decrease reported during May and June. Operating results of the company are beginning to reflect the increased use of electric power by one of the Technicolor process for making colored motion pictures, has announced invention of a new method of refrigeration which, in addition to performing the usual function of preserving food, is adapted to cooling of homes and small business buildings.

Radio Sponsors Express Faith

Notwithstanding widespread bearish attitude toward Radio Corporation of America shares, its most ardent friends express faith in their ability to attain higher levels in the reasonably near future.

A. T. & T.'s New Director Banker

In connection with firmness displayed by American Telephone & Telegraph stock it is pointed out that its new director represents a banking institution which had not previously been associated with the company.

Fox May Gain Larger Income

Confidence of the Fox sponsors in ability of the company easily to earn the $4 dividend is strengthened by current reports Loew's may enlarge its distribution. Fox is the largest stockholder in the Loew company.

Lorillard Pool Again Active

Encouraged presumably by the revival of buying and activity in the other tobacco shares, the pool in Lorillard resumed activities.

Electric Power as Utility Leader

Attempt is to be made, it was reported, to establish Electric Power & Light as the leader of the utility group for the immediate future.

Macy Continues in Demand

A bullish group, convinced a trade upturn is just around the corner, has been buying Macy in the belief this company will be among the first to benefit by revival of business.

Active Sponsors for the Waldorf

In anticipation of important expansion projects, Waldorf System probably will enjoy more aggressive market sponsorship in the near future.

Quiet Strength of Steel Impressive

Continued strength of Steel common, and its resistance to pressure, is one of the most encouraging developments of the past few days.

Short Interest in American Can

There is still a good-sized short interest in American Can. This has been shown by the amount of support which has come into the stock when moderate recessions have occurred. The bears have had little opportunity to cover commitments recently because offerings have been limited during technical setbacks and what selling has come was easily absorbed by the scale orders.

Canadian Buying in International Nickel

Houses with Canadian affiliations report that there has been a resumption of buying in International Nickel by Canadian interests, but thus far the purchases have been moderate. In some quarters the belief prevails that if general market conditions are satisfactory Nickel will do better as soon as the rights on the stock are out of the way.

Kennecott Copper Dividend Delay

The delay in taking action on the Kennecott dividend appears to have been the subject of various interpretations in Wall Street. Those who have viewed the situation optimistically point out that the management probably held up action with a view of the improvement in the situation, justifying continuation of the present rate.

Others are equally emphatic in their views that the delay is unfavorable because they believe it means some directors are in favor of reducing the rate as there is no sign as yet of any change for the better in the red metal industry. The uncertainty has resulted in some outsiders unloading their Kennecott into other stocks with more favorable prospects.

Republic Dividend Is in Doubt

As a result of the unsatisfactory earnings reported by Republic Steel, there is considerable doubt regarding the dividend. The action of the stock recently in seeking steadily lower levels indicates that liquidation has been in progress on a rather heavy scale. Action on the dividend is due any time now.

UPTURN SEEN BY BANK FOR BUSINESS

New York, Aug. 22—If and when "some bold spirits take the lead" and buy the several "nonperishable raw commodities now selling at virtually panic prices," the wheel of progress may be set in motion and give a new turn to the course of events, the Irving Trust Company said in its midmonth review of business.

"People are refraining from spending or from exercising business initiative merely because of the contagion of mass timidity," the bank believes, adding that "American economic history shows that this depression mood is very rarely of long duration."

The bank finds that installment credits have proved astonishingly satisfactory considering the large volume of unemployment. Gradual liquidation of these credits, which in the aggregate may have easily totaled $4,000,000,000 or more, it expects will pave the way for a new upward cycle in trade that may get under way with unexpected celerity.

"Gluts of raw materials persist," the review continues, "but in some quarters they have helped as a result of the drouth. Despite a large increase in business failures in July, credit conditions are easy and promise to continue so.

"In all lines of industry here and abroad, leaders of business enterprise are exercising every resource to eliminate waste and efficiency in order to put their concerns on a safe and paying basis."

BENDIX EARNS $779,255

Chicago, Aug. 23—Bendix Aviation Corporation reports net earnings, after all charges including Federal taxes, for a quarter ended June 30, of $779,255, or 37 cents a share on the 2,097,454 shares of stock outstanding. For the first six months, net after all charges was $1,530,837, or 73 cents a share on the shares of stock outstanding.

No comparison with a year ago is available because of a change in the corporate structure incident to many acquisitions and consolidations in which Bendix Aviation Corporation has participated.

Vincent Bendix, president, in issuing earnings statement, said:

"These earnings are after substantial write-offs incident to the dismantling of Stromberg Motor Devices' Chicago plant, and moving it to new and modern plant in South Bend.

"Progress has been made in the reduction of operating expense and increased efficiency. Saving of $40,000 monthly in overhead has recently been effected and other steps are being taken which should further reduce our costs.

"The current position of the corporation is strong and earnings for the third quarter should be improved by reason of a judgment recently entered in favor of Stromberg Motor Devices Company, a subsidiary of Bendix Aviation Corporation, against Zenith Carburetor Company, in the amount of $268,000, thus ending a litigation on a patent infringement in progress for many years.

"We anticipate that this judgment will be paid in the current quarter."

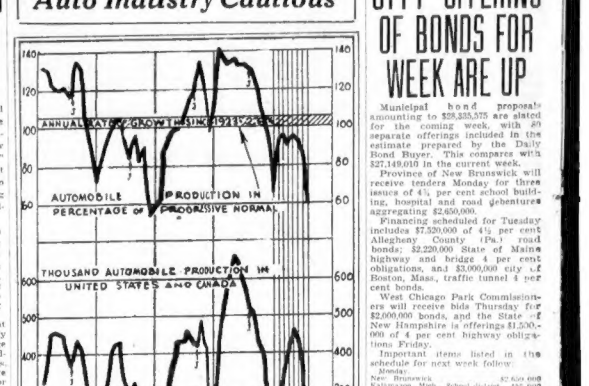
Auto Industry Cautious



AUTOMOBILE PRODUCTION in Canada and United States charted.

However blue the automotive skies may now appear to some, this much at least must be said of the industry: It has not permitted itself to produce an indigestible surplus to stand in the way of resumption when new demands reassert themselves.

Unlike agriculture and certain other lines the industry rarely produces on the basis of long-time anticipated demands merely for the purpose of giving plant capacity full employment. When the demand for cars falls off automobile manufacturers shut their plants.

Although this makes the production curve swing up and down within short periods of time it is a wholesome check upon overproduction. This finds its reflection in normal or less than normal stocks in the hands of distributors and in the excellent position of instalment sales.

The finance companies report that a larger proportion of the cars bought this year were paid for outright than in any other previous year since the war. There has been an increase in repossessions, but this has been of very modest proportions.

Atlantic Refining Report Is Issued

Atlantic Refining Co. and subsidiaries report for the six months ended June 30, 1930 net profit of $2,818,823 after all charges and taxes, equal to $1.04 a share on 2,496,581 shares of $25 par common stock. This compares with net for the same corresponding period of a year ago of $8,862,000, equal after preferred dividends (preferred was retired May 1, 1929) to $3.06 a share on 2,866,634 common shares outstanding June 30, 1929.

Net profit for quarter ended June 30, 1930, was $1,894,523 after charges, equal to 63 cents a share on 2,496,581 shares, comparing with $1,124,300 or 42 cents a share on 2,685,884 shares in preceding quarter and $4,-019,909 or $1.73 a share on 2,866,634 shares in June quarter of 1929.

Employment will be given next month to a hundred additional men, according to officials.

Some large electric locomotive contracts have been received at the Erie plant, according to the works manager, and the outlook for capacity production during the last quarter is good.

The mildly cheerful tenor of the weekly trade reviews, Secretary Mellon's statement that there is "real hope" of continuance of the income tax reduction, and the refusal of speculative interests to attach any considerable importance to the recent action against Warner Bros. all helped the bull crowd. The electrical industry in the United States will reach a new peak in domestic customer increase this year, according to large gains in electric refrigerator sales, L. E. Moffatt, editor of Electrical Merchandising, announced today in making public the results of a nation wide survey of public utility domestic customer volume.

The new peak will come in the face of a decline of 10 per cent under the number of new homes wired for electricity in 1929.

"The high domestic customer gains to be reached this year will come through a combination of new business traceable to income from homes wired in new houses and to electric refrigerator installations," said Mr. Moffatt.

"Grouping of the two classes of new revenue sources will show for the industry a net gain of at least 3,000,000 domestic customers. The figure almost reaches that of 1924, in which year the central station companies reached 3,148,000 new homes, the largest gain in domestic customers ever recorded.

"Approximately 800,000 new dwellings will be wired by the end of this year. The total is a drop of 10 per cent from the total of 880,000 for 1929. But the number of electric refrigerator customers will jump to about 900,000, showing a gain of 270,000 over the total of 630,000 refrigerator sales reached last year.

"Both classes of domestic power in new sources are practically equal in their revenue values to the public utility. The average domestic customer income per year from a wired home is $36. The revenue represented by an electric refrigerator is almost exactly the same amount.

"Reported declines in the number of new homes wired in the United States only seem to represent great losses," said Mr. Moffatt, "when they are compared with the volumes of such installations achieved in the years immediately following the World War. In those years, the electrical industry had available tremendous generating capacity which had been built to meet demands caused by post-war industrial expansion. The industry, seeking outlets for this generating capacity, made an intensive drive to create new domestic customers.

"The came from the ranks of the owners of old homes, as well as from the builders of new ones. In time, the percentage of old homes wired for electricity substantially reached the saturation point and since then the industry, finding its domestic customers in the field of new home construction, is due for a new wired homes customer volume the rise or fall of new dwelling construction.

"Today, in the United States, the average old home in a community of any size is wired for electricity. Generally speaking, the old home to-day is a prospect for new domestic customer increase to the average electric light and power company.

"The present rate of growth of appliance use, especially in refrigeration and cooking," the editor added in his survey report, "indicates continued gains in revenue to the utilities companies. As the use of appliances increases, the industry will achieve revenue gains from domestic customers at present unheard of in utilities history, and this despite present well established policies of rate reduction."

LOWER EARNINGS

S. J., Boston—Please give information on Union Carbide & Carbon, and your opinion of a purchase of the stock.

Ans.—Union Carbide & Carbon controls 20 concerns manufacturing chemical products and dividends have been paid from 1918. The annual rate on the new stock, split three-for-one in April, 1929, is $2.00 a share. Adjusted to the increased capitalization earnings in 1929 were $4.19 a share; 1928, $3.72 a share; in 1927, $3.17, and in 1926, $3.03. In the first six months of the current year, $1.42 a share contrasted with $1.75 for the corresponding period of 1929. The yield now is 3⅞ per cent.

SHOULD SHE BUY?

G. F. L., Ipswich—I have $1000 in the savings bank and want more yield for my money. Should I buy a good copper?

Ans.—Do not buy anything. Your present savings bank reserve is insufficient against some emergency, such as might come to any of us.

LOW YIELD

T. E., Kilby st.—What is your opinion of a purchase of Standard Oil of New Jersey around current levels?

Ans.—Standard Oil of New Jersey has reported satisfactory earnings for many years. Dividends, with extras, have been paid since dissolution of the old Standard Oil, more than seventeen years ago. However, were you to buy the stock now you would get 3.8 per cent from the regular $1 dividend and current extras. When dividends will warrant recent prices has not been indicated. Extras of 12½ cents a share were paid in each quarter of 1927 and 1928, increased to 25 cents a share on June 15, 1929; since maintained.

BROKERS GIVE VIEWS ON STOCK MARKET

Paine, Webber & Co.—As a trading proposition, the present market does not hold serious risks.

Hornblower & Weeks — We would continue to have faith in the market and hold stocks over the week-end.

Clark, Childs & Co.—We anticipate more favorable business news and higher stock prices.

Gurnett & Co.—We believe any weakness from current levels offers opportunities for profitable commitments.

Hayden, Stone & Co.—We believe that readjustment has been very nearly, if not entirely, completed, and that a countertrend of substantial importance is due, be liberally rewarded.

Otis & Co.—This condition of suspended animation cannot last very much longer. Such normally active, wide-swinging stocks as American Can, American & Foreign Power, Consolidated Gas, Radio, Union Carbide and U. S. Steel must very shortly break out of the two to four-point range in which they have fluctuated aimlessly for three days. We believe the chances are good that these stocks will break through on the upside.

Ticker Talk

—By THE WALL STREET SPECTATOR—

New York, Aug. 23—The stock market continues its slow, methodical pace toward recovery, ignoring the isolated instances of weakness and the occasional spells of tight money. Even in spite renewed sluggishness in the copper rail and oil divisions yesterday, the main body of stocks ruled generally firm. The averages for 90 stocks recorded an advance of more than a point, retrieving the greater part of the previous day's decline.

Certain observers point out that the behavior of the market during the present week is similar to that of the period after the June decline. Following the initial rebound in prices the market recovered rather sharply until it had regained approximately 50 per cent of its lost ground. Thereafter, it drifted along in a leisurely fashion for nearly four weeks, with turnover extremely dull and with the public quite built of the daily activity confined to a select handful of speculative favorites.

The appearance of the drouth news and possibilities of a genuine crop scare, proved the deciding factor in forcing the market to break out of its trading rut and to move ahead. In the time, however, financial quarters are awaiting hopefully for optimistic advices from trade centers which will point the way forward for stocks. It is not within the realm of possibility that some unexpected piece of favorable news would stir the bullish contingent into action and bring sharply higher levels in the market. On the same basis of reasoning the converse might very logically be brought about, except that the indifference that has been shown to other favorable news of late makes this latter course somewhat remote.

A development, however, that can only be construed constructively is the successive new highs being established daily by average bond prices. It is a well-known maxim that a strong bond market normally precedes a similar stock market.

Investment Stocks

One of the developments of interest in recent months has been the growth of the fixed investment trust, the purpose of which is to accumulate leading stocks of representative industries, and finance them as a group. Naturally the success of this venture requires that the stocks assembled be those whose future prospects and present investment rating will warrant holding over the allotted period. The selections made by the managers of one of the recent holding companies of this type are presented here to give the average investor an idea of the companies believed in line for participation in the future. This list includes: American Telephone and Telegraph, Consolidated Gas of New York, United States Steel, Dupont, National Biscuit, North American, Borden, Eastman Kodak, Westinghouse Electric, General Electric, Standard Oil of New Jersey, New York Central, Union Carbide, American Can, Pennsylvania International Harvester, Electric Bond and Share, United Gas Improvement, and Atchison.

Woolworth

A lengthy analysis of the leading chain store organization reveals the company has been much better showing in profits than in sales thus far this year. This has been made possible because of a margin of about 65 per cent over the current dividend of $2.40. The stock affords a yield of close to 4 per cent at current levels.

United Corporation

Renewed interest in this Morgan-Drexel-Bonbright offspring has been shown during the past week. Interest stressing the favorable outlook for this company point out that the heavy investments which United Corporation has made in the shares of leading Eastern utilities should eventually prove instrumental in consolidating the properties into a huge superpower system, serving New York State and the heavily industrialized sections along the Eastern seaboard.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

Editor Boston American:

In reply to letter written by E. C. S. in today's issue, I want to say that he is in error. "I heartily agree with you," he writes, "that under the present management more rapid transit extensions will be under way such as you mentioned, and that private management may stop further development."

In the first place you did not say "more rapid transit extensions will be under way under the present management," because you know any more rapid transit extensions are practically impossible.

The Governor sq. bill has been on the statute books for five years, and not until Mayor Curley agreed to the city of Boston would pay 50 per cent of any deficit caused by the increased rentals, could the extension be built. Under the 1918 Public Control act the directors of the Elevated could and did hold up that construction. A new bill was drawn and passed this year, but the city of Boston had to agree to shoulder an unjust apportionment of the cost.

This extension is less than a mile long, and will cost $3,100,000. What possible chance is there for the 20 to 30 millions of dollars worth of extensions that are needed, under the present Public Control act?

He further says, "Wonder if Mr. Twohig and the public have forgotten that the 'L' was almost bankrupt in 1918, and since the general manager and board of directors took over the destinies of the road it is worth double the amount?"

I have not forgotten that the "L" was almost bankrupt, and I haven't forgotten what the legislature of 1918 put over on the people.

I haven't forgotten that there has been poured into that road close to $70,000,000 of the car-riders' and taxpayers' money, and that during this time the stockholders have sat back and collected $40,000,000 more in guaranteed dividends.

Why should we continue to guarantee dividends? Why should the people continue to run this business for the benefit of these stockholders? Why continue a policy that prohibits any further rapid transit extensions? Why not take over the road and run it for the people?

REPRESENTATIVE JAMES J. TWOHIG.

Why Europeans Do Not Come to United States

Editor Boston American:

It's ridiculous to expect European tourists to flock to this country as long as the "Noble Experiment" is in force. The whole world by this time knows that we expect everybody to be bone dry, to regulate one's diet according to the dictates of the Anti-Saloon League and similar moralists.

The reason thousands of Americans visit Europe during the summer months is because they want to get out of the desert once a year. Travel bureaus and tourist agencies organized by the government will not be very successful as long as this prohibition farce is in force. J. COLLINS.

Takes Issue With Lynn Writer on Immigrants

Editor Boston American:

H. R. B. of Lynn evidently does not know that the present immigration quota is hardly large enough to admit children to parents, parents to children, wives to their husbands and husbands to their wives. Would he stop from admitting wives to their husbands or children to their parents?

It is not true that immigrants come here by the thousands every day. The present immigration quota is so small that even children of United States citizens, if they are over 21 years old, cannot come here to live with their parents.

Fears Cambridge Has Nest of Auto Thieves

Editor Boston American:

Is Cambridge becoming the haunt of auto thieves? After my experience it strikes me that there is a nest of them in that educational center.

One day this week, I left my auto on Dana st. just for a few minutes and upon returning found it in the hands of a man about 17 years old, trying to start it.

I caught him red handed, thanks to the stubbornness of the starter. I did not hand him over to the police, but instead gave him some good advice which seemed to sink into his mind. This is the second experience I have had of this kind in that city. I think autoists should be on their guard there.

Back to the Days of the Hoop Skirt Again

Editor Boston American:

During this tercentenary year among the many different events we must not forget Captain Beebe who bought a lot of hoop skirts during the Civil War times, sailed away from Boston with them in well, the darkies and the inhabitants of the Malay Islands. The natives were carried away with the hoop skirts upon seeing them. They were told that Americans wore them constantly as decoration to their dresses.

But the Malay women wanted to wear the hoop skirts in their own way and the darkies once who got them wore them outside of their dresses as they would show to better advantage and get the envy of those who did not have them.

I remember these hoop skirts in my boyhood days and what an expansive thing they were and how could women ever like them, has always been a mystery in dress reform to me.

Wants to Know Why "Dry" Killers Go Free

Editor Boston American:

Off and on for the past weeks I've been listening to lawyers quibble over the 18th amendment.

After all, why lose patience with them when even the Federal Government itself seems to be all at sea as to its interpretation.

Will these lawyers discussing its legal aspects so earnestly explain how enforcement officers can murder and receive no more punishment than a rebuke? That is, we hope they were at least spoken to harshly.

The average citizen who has no knowledge of the law is apt, of, but a lot of common sense, wants the evils of prohibition corrected. They include corruption, graft, murder, gang-bombings and killings, and general law-breaking.

Massachusetts is to be congratulated for putting the "Baby Volstead Act" on the ballot for referendum next November 4. If the citizens vote "Yes" it will mean that they want Section 2a, Chapter 138 of the General Laws repealed. That's the famous "Baby Volstead Act" under which Garrett operated so successfully for his selfish ends and so disastrously for the reputation of Boston's police.

Who Started All This Battling Around

Editor Boston American:

Say! who started all this battling?

Aimee Semple McPherson led off with a crack on her mother's nose. This shook the ecclesiastical world. It is still reverberating there.

Mayor Richard M. Russell, of Cambridge, gave Supt. of Streets William R. McMeninen, of the same city, more than a delicate touch on his chin.

A deacon in a Baptist church out West gave his pastor a biff in the eye, closing it for repairs and now there is a suit following.

The deacon was accused of being a bootlegger. St. Peter got mad out off Maichus's ear with a sword. Jesus rebuked that she did nothing different than this apostle would do under the circumstances. Also, he is her mother. But when is this business going to stop?

Bay State Named By Indians For Blue Hills

Editor Boston American:

In reply to the inquiry made by John K. Springer may I suggest a quotation from the Standard Dictionary of the derivation how the state came to be named Massachusetts — Natick Indian word Massanset, contraction of Massa, "great" adchu, "mountain," or "near" "the place of great hills" (reference to the Blue Hills). Roger Williams writes: I have learned that Massachusetts was so called from the Blue Hills.

This is copied word for word.

Blames Women for Men Sticking to the Job

Editor Boston American:

You say that Curley wrote that "men want to work and should be cared for by federal government" but he is way off the question. No man wants to work.

A man works because of the necessity. You don't work and will never work unless your wife forces you to do so. Curley is about a hundred years out of date. Please wake up, this is the year 1930, not 1900.

Harvard Opens War on Inferiority Complex

Editor Boston American:

Over 200 Harvard Summer School it was urged to get rid of the inferiority complex by one of the speakers.

The most dangerous thing today, as well as the hardest to dodge is the superiority complex which is sapping away the vitality of our democracy in this country. M. J. TOUNGMAN.

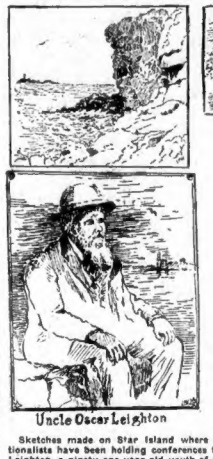
Star Island Becomes Unitarian Summer Colony



Uncle Oscar Leighton

Sketches made on Star Island where Unitarians and Congregationalists have been holding conferences this summer. Uncle Oscar Leighton, a ninety one year old youth of the Shoals, came first over from Portsmouth in 1839. At his birthday this summer the Unitarians gave him the entire works of his sister widely known as the poet Celia Thaxter. "Uncle Oscar" commands the excursion boat which makes the rounds of the islands once or twice each day. Today is the last of a happy and successful conference season. Next week is called "Vacation Week" when both Unitarians and Congregationalists come together for nothing more serious than fun and recreation, and good-will.

PORT OF BOSTON IN REVIEW

By CARL MORRISON

Police Commissioner Hultman has been asked to make a ruling on procedure of the harbor police in circumstances relating to recovery of bodies from the harbor.

An incident occurring yesterday afternoon caused complaints to be made to the commissioner. The body of an unidentified man was picked up from the harbor in Charlestown, and taken by the harbor police to Constitution wharf.

On the man's finger was a signet ring with the initials J. S. G. In the belief that this man was Jerome S. Zwicker, formerly quartermaster on the New York, local officials of the Eastern Steamship Co. went to the wharf to make identification.

The men were Capt. Herbert Parker, veteran port captain of the line, and Richard Gray, master of the New York and well acquainted with Zwicker. At the wharf they were informed by the harbor police that they would not be allowed to view the body.

"We expect a relative from Norwood, and that'll be all the identification we want," the harbor master said in the low tone.

A formal protest was filed with Commissioner Hultman by members of the Marine News Reporters Association, comprising ships news writers of several Boston papers.

The offer to identify the body had been made by Eastern Steamship officials as a courtesy to the press representatives who did not wish to wait several hours for the formal identification at the morgue.

Free Girl in Slaying of Publisher's Son

Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, Aug. 23 (AP)—A jury today acquitted Sylvia Serafim, Brasilian writer on trial yesterday for shooting to death of Roberto Rodrigues, cartoonist, son of a newspaper publisher, Dec. 26. The motive charged that Rodrigues had caused publication of details of the woman's private life.

Lucky Girl

ning after she had been at Vaughan and Farnsworth's about a week.

"Besides," he went on, putting a fine point on Cathie's pet peeve, "she's a little jealous."

"Jealous!"

"Yeh, jealous. She's noticed the boss takin' an interest in you."

"In ME? Mr. Farnsworth! Why, Bobby, you must be talking in your sleep. He hasn't said two words to me since I—"

"Yeh. That's A. A. Farnsworth. He don't talk much, and only about fifty dollars a word when he does. He's a big gun—"

"But Bobby, I hope I haven't done anything to make Miss Darrow dislike me! I certainly haven't meant to—"

The youngest member of the staff of Vaughan and Farnsworth looked at the new stenographer with wondering pity.

Just Speculating

"Next thing you'll be asking me do I think babies are found in cabbages," he grinned.

Cathie flushed and went back to her typing. She wouldn't be made fun of by an office boy.

"Aw, don't get sore, I didn't mean anything. I thought you knew Darrow was setting her cap for the boss."

"Mr. Farnsworth? Why he's too old!" she cried indignantly.

"Yeh?" Well, Darrow don't think so. I'll bet she gets him before Christmas. I'll bet you a dollar against a dog lead dime. Ten to one that—"

"You shouldn't gossip. I don't want to hear another word."

"Gossip! That ain't gossip. That's speculating. If you want to start something you ask Martha Darrow about the Moore Brothers!"

Her Sugar Papa

The Moore Brothers . . . it couldn't be . . . yes it was, she knew it was! But maybe it was the brother.

Cathie put another sheet of paper in her machine.

"I know a Gordon Moore," she said, adjusting it nobly.

"You do? Wait till Darrow gets on to that. That's him. That's her sugar papa."

Cathie's face very fast, stopped to erase a mistake, battled on again.

"Where did you meet him?" Bobbie Timkin persisted.

"None of your business. Besides it was a long time ago. Now you keep quiet. I have work to do."

Clickety-click. Clickety-click. The keys of Cathie's typewriter fairly flew. But even the office boy, planning to himself as he stamped the outgoing mail, could see that it would all have to be done over.

"Hot dog," said he to himself. "Hot dog. Wait till those two janes rain over that guy!"

ANTI-DRY LAW OPINION HELD BY PROBERS

By FRASER EDWARDS
Universal Service

Washington, Aug. 23—President Hoover's law enforcement commission was reported on reliable authority today to be almost unanimously of the opinion that prohibition can never be enforced effectively.

This report arose in the discussion that has followed the statement of Chairman Wickersham that the commission was unanimously opposed to the "theory" of the Jones five and ten law.

ONE FOR ENFORCEMENT

Judge Williams S. Kenyon of Iowa is the only member of the commission who has faith in the effective enforcement of the prohibition law, according to this authority. As a senator, Kenyon was an ardent dry and is the co-sponsor of the Webb-Kenyon act to prohibit the interstate transportation of liquor into dry states before national prohibition.

Since becoming a member of the commission, Kenyon is reported to have differed openly with members of the other members who have pronounced anti-prohibition and liberal views. He is credited with inspiring the attacks of dry senators upon the commission for its failure to confine its inquiry to the dry law alone.

LIVELY ROW LIKELY

Just what the final report of the commission will recommend on the prohibition question, no one in authority can predict, but it is said there is likely to be a lively row over the issue when that time arrives a year hence.

In some informed quarters, it is said that the commission will make no specific recommendation, but will outright repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment or modification of the Volstead Act, or such alternatives as a governmental control or state regulation of the liquor traffic.

Texas Democrats March to Polls

Austin, Texas, Aug. 23—With the heavy artillery of Farmer Jim Ferguson, impeached governor of Texas, and Ross Sterling, millionaire capitalist, stilled, Texas waited expectantly today, for the small arms fire of the voters in what is the most bitter gubernatorial campaign in history.

Miriam A. Ferguson, once governor of Texas, and running again after her husband was barred from the ticket the second time, and Sterling are the two candidates seeking the Democratic nomination.
